NRA Moves To Regulate Retail Prices In All Stores

Johnson Plans to Form Agencies for Control of Trade Practices.

Roosevelt Gets Coal Code Today

Boards Enforcing Pacts Will Give "Friendly Aid" to Firms.

(Associated Press.)

Recovery leaders last night turned to important problems of retail trade price control as Gen. Hugh S. Johnson prepared to hand President Roosevelt the soft coal covenant today for his signature. The move is expected to affect every retail store.

Minor details in the controversial bituminous charter, signed Saturday after protracted disagreement, were smoothed out by the administrator yesterday. President Roosevelt's approval was virtually certain as he had kept a close hand on the code's formulation.

Meanwhile, Johnson announced a policy of "friendly aid rather than the iron fist" in guiding local compliance boards, set up to help enforce the Blue Eagle campaign.

Boards to Aid Firms.

Regulations promulgated by Johnson stressed that the boards were "not councils of inquisition or compulsion as their function primarily is to be of service to all employers who have signed the President's agreement." He said the boards would keep individual employers informed regarding their obligations.

Johnson attached a warning that "If an employer wilfully persists in noncompliance" the Government will take his Blue Eagle away.

The price control question now up for decision finds a stack of briefs on the desk of Donald Richberg, NRA counsel, for and against the provisions in the retail code for maintaining minimum prices at 10 per cent above the wholesale cost.

Because of the wrangling over the coal code, neither Richberg nor Johnson has been able to give the price issue the attention they wished.

Johnson Speeds Study.

Since this is an urgent code, both must now study the price problem, along with consideration of getting

James Bruce, Baltimore, and George M. Lindsay, New York, yesterday were named to the staff of the Home Owners Loan Corporation as plans to push sale of $2,000,000,000 corporation bonds neared completion.

Both men have extensive financial and investment background. Bruce will be stationed in Washington as financial adviser to the board of directors. Lindsay will be fiscal agent of the corporation at New York.

Bruce and Lindsay are the first to be appointed on a campaign staff to "sell" banks, insurance companies, financial houses and the public on the investment value of the 4 per cent bonds.

Bruce is the son of former Senator William Cabell Bruce. He is a former vice president of the Chase National Bank and the National Park Bank, New York. Lindsay served as vice president and director of Blair Corporation and in the same capacity with Bancamerica.

Paris Hears About Secret Reconciliation There.

Paris, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—A reconciliation between former King Alfonso XIII, and his heir, the Prince of Asturias, has been reached, Le Journal said today.

The report said the king had pardoned his former crown prince, whom he denounced when the youth married a commoner, the beautiful Cuban senorita, Edelmira San Pedro.

Alfonso and the prince were said to have met secretly in a Paris hotel yesterday. The paper predicted an announcement of the former monarch's pardon would be made soon.

U. S. Will Lend $150,000,000 On Farm Liens

R. F. C. Plans Joint Aid to Debtors, Banks With Frozen Assets.

(Associated Press.)

Supplementing its recent offer to help NRA industries with low interest loans to banks for relending to merchants and manufacturers, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation yesterday announced a plan to lend $150,000,000 for refinancing farm mortgages.

"As a means of assisting and cooperating with the Farm Credit Administration program," Chairman Jesse H. Jones said, "the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has agreed to loan $150,000,000 to Federal Land Banks to be secured by consolidated Federal farm loan 4 per cent bonds."

Previous Loans Included.

The $150,000,000 includes $35,000,000 and $10,000,000 which the corporation previously agreed to advance for the same purpose to the Federal Land Banks of St. Paul and Omaha.

"The Farm Credit Administration program," Jones said, "contemplates the refinancing of farm mortgages now held by either open or closed banks, through the Federal Land Banks.

"The refinancing will enable the Farm Credit Administration to improve the position of open banks whose working capital has been restricted, and speed liquidation of closed banks unable to realize on slow assets.

Normal Flow Foreseen.

"The program on either case will do much to restore the normal flow of cash and credit."

Last week the Reconstruction Finance Corporation announced a new liberal credit policy, whereby it will make available approximately $1,000,000,000 for loans to banks and trust and mortgage companies for relending to NRA employers. The money will be lent for six months at 3 per cent, the banks being allowed to relend at 5 per cent.

Ten thousand Frenchmen witnessed the gesture for the first time in Paris. The crowd received the salute in silence, a few minutes later however, giving polite applause.

Singing of "DeutschlandUeber Alles", followed the "Marsellaise" and the visiting athletes again gave the Fascist salute. Germany won the track meet, 83 to 68.

Unions Drive For 500,000 NewMembers

Showdown Battle Nears for More Fruits of NRA Program.

The American Federation of Labor is strivng feverishly to swell its membership still another half-million by October 2 for a showdown "battle" and an ultimatum demanding additional fruits of the Roosevelt recovery program for workers.

In making the announcement last night, William Green, Federation president, promised the "battle" as well as the campaign "to pull the teeth of special privilege" will be launched at the A. F. of L. convention which opens in Washington on that date.

He forecast that "important revelations" would be made at the convention and that the gathering would be the largest to be held since President Wilson addressed the Buffalo war-time convention in 1917.

Breach Widened Further.

The announcement, further widening the breach between capital and labor which has been developing in NRA code disputes, was regarded as being aimed especially at those industries clinging to the open shop and company union theories.

Asserting the report of the Federation's executive council to be offered at the convention will make clear that the federation "is going to organize the unorganized," Green said:

"The federation is not going to be stopped in its energetic and sweeping campaign to bring workers into unions throughout the Nation.

"It is going to continue to be, as it has been for more than half a century, the recognized, all-embracing spokesman for American labor. That means there is no room in the United States for any other labor movement.

Seeks Lower Work Weeks.

"Not only are we concerned as to reduction of weekly work hours to a level lower than the average thus far fixed in codes, both temporary and permanent, and higher wage levels than the average thus far established, but we are concerned about the question of adequate representation of labor in machinery created under the codes.

"Our convention may be expected to express itself emphatically on this question of representation and to demand that in all of the new machinery of industrial government labor be represented by men of its own choosing, as a matter of right and not as a matter of privilege. This is one of the fundamental issues of the whole present situation.

"The present contest undoubtedly will be settled in favor of the masses of the people. America then will be able to look forward to permanent well-being and continuous progress. We shall have pulled the teeth of special privilege. Our convention undoubtedly will lay down the lines of battle."

Holds NRA Must Win.

Green declared that the federation has "no unduly optimistic picture of the benefits of the recovery act in terms of new employment up to this time." He asserted, however, that "the act is sound in principle, it has started the Nation on the upward swing and must succeed for the reason that failure means chaos that the Nation can not stand."

What the act requires, he made plain, is strengthened operation so as to produce more employment and additional purchasing power.

Jungle Heat Kills Bolivian Fighters

Detachment Cut Off by Paraguayan Forces.

La Paz, Bolivia, Sept. 17 (A.P.).—Several detachments of Bolivian troops taking part in an important maneuver in the Fort Arce section of the Gran Chaco were lost in the jungle and cut off by the enemy with heavy casualties, it was revealed today in a general staff communique.

Holderman's glider was towed 6,500 feet high by an airplane.

Winkler Meeting at Graz Broken Up; Dollfuss Split Attested.

Vienna, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Riots broke out in a mass meeting at Graz today, where Minister of the Interior Winkler was addressing the first country-wide rally of the Staendische Front, new political organization.

A score of persons were sent to hospitals and 100 others were arrested.

The Graz meeting was one of two political gatherings at which speakers of rival factions indicated the wide split in ranks of followers of Chancellor Dollfuss.

The other gathering was at Kufstern, where Ernst Starhembert and Richard Steidel, Heimwher (Home Guards) leaders, addressed thousands.

These speakers at two rallies declared that while they were unanimously with Dollfuss against Nazis and Socialists, they were ready even to eject him from office unless he incorporated their respective programs and wide-apart political creeds in the new constitution.

Starhembert and Steidel announced they would support Dollfuss only in so far as he carried out promises to adopt, "word for word," the Heimwher 1930 program.

Bailey's Trial Starts Today

Eleven Others Accused With Him in Urschel Kidnaping.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 17 (A.P.).—In a carefully guarded courtroom, Harvey Bailey, Southwestern badman, goes to trial wth 11 other accused conspirators here tomorrow for the nine-day kidnaping that cost Charles F. Urschel $200,000.

Rumors of possible attempts at delivery caused prosecutors to guard against escape and to seek maximum penalties of life mprisonment.

Last night District Attorney Herbert K. Hyde turned down an attorney's offer for the surrender of George (Machine Gun) Kelly, who has escaped a Naton-wide search, conditioned on the release of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. (Boss) Shannon and their son, Armon, relatives of Mrs. Kelly, who also is wanted on the kidnaping indictment.

Urschel has told but little of his fearsome experience.

Joseph B. Keenan, Special Assstant Attorney General, heads the prosecution.

Gale Batters New England Coast, Ships

Marine, Land Property and Roads Hit by Raging Waters.

Death Toll Up to 10 in North Carolina and Pennsylvania.

(Associated Press.)

Gales pounded the New England coast Sunday, as the tropical storm moved northeastward.

The Coast Guard cutter Modoc left Wilmington, N. C., to aid the tanker Fuel Oil, crippled from Saturday's hurricane, 70 miles northeast of Frying Pan Shoals.

Eight were drowned in North Carolina and two in Pennsylvania. Damage in the Carolinas was placed at $2,000,000, with half of it around New Bern, N. C.

Latest reports from the Tampico area of Mexico, where a storm struck Friday, said more than 100 were dead.

Eastern Rivers Out.

New York, Sept. 17 (A.P.).—Gales whipped the Massachusetts coast tonight as the tropical hurricane that damaged the Carolina coast moved along the New England seaboard.

New England rivers were on rampages, highways washed out, and small shipping endangered.

The Weather Bureau reported a 52-mile-an-hour wind at Nantucket, with the barometer falling. Heavy seas were pounding the shore. Steamboat communication was suspended.

Schooner Goes Aground.

The Albert S. Fall, a schooner, was aground off Sewalls Point in Hampton Roads, Va., the Coast Guard cutter Mascoutin was sent to her aid.

The Jacksonville-bound Clyde-Mallory liner Henry R. Mallory, overdue at Charleston, S. C., since yesterday, was safe about 190 miles south of Scotland lightship, off the Jersey coast.

The Ward Line received a report from its liner Morro Castle, unreported for 24 hours, that it, too, was off Scotland lightship and was proceeding cautiously in heavy seas. It was expected in New York tomorrow with 140 passengers aboard.

The storm was reported about 150 miles east of Atlantic City, moving northeastward. It still was attended by heavy gales over a considerable area and by winds of hurricane force over a small area.

Two Cities Hard Hit.

Warnings flew from the Maine Coast to Jersey, and shipping was cautioned as far south as Atlantic City.

Morehead City and New Bern, N. C., apparently bore the brunt of the storm. Authorities estimated the damage at New Bern at more than $1,000,000, where a 100-mile wind piled debris in the streets, whipped the Neuse River bridge to pieces and tore docks away. The city was dark last night.

Low lying fishing villages in the Virginia Cape county suffered from high water, but Norfolk escaped severe damage when the wind suddenly changed its course and missed the city.

Sheriff C. E. Brinson said scarcely a building was standing in Oriental, Vandemere, Bayboro, Arpaho and surrounding North Carolina towns. Merrimon lost 28 of its 30 houses, Salter Path, 11 of 35, and Cape Lookout was reported wiped out.

A small vessel giving the name of Dorothy Allen called for help off Morehead City, but it had not been located tonight.

Cuban Strikers Demand Boycott on U. S. Goods; New Riots Threatened

Four Miners Believed Dead Fight Way From Flooded Pit

Companion Who Set Out by Himself Fails to Reach Safety.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Four miners, given up as dead, struggled through water today to escape uninjured from the flooded Truesdale mine, where they had been trapped for 15 hours.

The missing miner was Raphael Sweeney, 45, a foreman. The five men were at work in a tunnel 1,100 feet underground when water from the surface rushed upon them.

All fled to a higher elevation, but again they found themselves trapped by rising water. They waited for hours in a cramped tunnel until outside pumps, manned by rescue crews, began to drain off the water.

When their mining lamps threatened to flicker out, the five men held a consultation, but could not agree on the shortest route to the surface. After the four decided on one course, Sweeney struck out for himself and was not seen again.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt has asked and been refused the resignation of William E. Humphrey, Republican member of the Federal Trade Commission.

The President's request, directed to Humphrey early in the summer, was for a resignation effective August 15. To date the Chief Executive has not received the resignation.

Question of Policies.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his request to Humphrey, took the position that while another Republican would have to be appointed to fill the place, his administration policies with respect to the Federal Trade Commission could be achieved better through one of his own appointees.

Unconfirmed reports here were that the President planned to put Philip LaFollette, Progressive Republican and Wisconsin's former governor, in Humphrey's seat.

Instead of resigning, Humphrey wrote the President that the Trade Commission was a continuing and independent body not under presidential control.

Organic Law Cited.

He further said that the organic law creating the commission permitted removal of a commissioner only for wrongdoing or inefficiency. Neither of these grounds has been cited.

Humphrey served in the House for 14 years as a representative from Washington. President Coolidge appointed him to the commission in 1925 and he was reappointed by President Hoover in 1931.

Humphrey last night declined any comment on reports of the President's request or his refusal to resign.

(Copyright, 1933, by the United Press.)

Havana, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—A boycott of American products was demanded by striking workers tonight as a protest against possibility of United States intervention.

The workers in a wildly enthusiastic demonstration at Manzanillo approved a resolution supporting the strike of employes in the Mabay Sugar Central, a plant in which most of the capital is American.

Their leaders announced a general strike tomorrow and a boycott of American products. The workers cheered.

Organization of a soviet of workers at the Mabay Sugar Central was reported at Santiago tonight. The action was said to have been taken at the first session of the assembly of delegates of Sugar Central workers.

Strikes wee declared by wokers of the Manati and Union Sugar Centrals.

Americans Warned.

The American Consul at Santiago issued a warning to all Americans in that vicinity to concentrate at Rente, across the harbor, in case trouble starts. The U. S. destroyer Talbot remained on guard there, but there was no move to land U. S. Marines.

Many American women and children are reported to have evacuated Santiago for Rente. Santiago was calm, but tension there and at Matanzas was reported increasing. The strike of stevedores at Santiago was ordered postponed.

Action in the provinces followed demonstrations in Havana over the week-end in which thousands shouted: "Down with Yankee imperialism!" and denounced U. S. Ambassador Sumner Welles. Anti-American feeling was reported growing.

Ambassador Welles conferred at length with President Grau San Martin this afternoon, but refused comment and seemed more optimistic.

Parties Dissolved.

Meanwhile, President Ramon Grau San Martin issued a decree today dissolving all political parties and consolidating his dictatorial control of the republic. His regime, it is admitted in high quarters, is an out-and-out dictatorship and will remain so until the constitution has been rewritten and the government can restore a constitutional administration.

President Grau San Martin was reported considering decree extending the vote to women. Members of the "women's revolutionary groups" held an antiintervention mass meeting in fraternity park this afternoon.

The student directorate, with which the president, himself a university professor, is closely cooperating, issued a manifesto appealing to all Cubans to unite in the defense of the revolution against "internal reaction and foreign economic forces."

Wires Censored.

A censorship on all telegraphic communications throughout the island was established.

The president issued a statement appealing for a truce in all sectors to enable authorities to proceed with their plans for a constituent assembly election.

The 300 former army officers remained entrenched in the National Hotel, where they shouted out to friends that they had sufficient supplies to last three months. The reason they are not arrested, it seems, is that the authorities feel a close guard can be kept over them in the hotel without the cost of feeding them.

Further opposition to the revolutionary government developed today among prominent commercial and industrial interests in Hanava.

Inflation Plea Mapped Today For President

(Associated Press.)

A general program of inflation to improve farm prices will be outlined here today by members of Congress from southern States, who are expected to present their views to President Roosevelt.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, leading inflation advocate and a delegate to the meeting today, outlined tentative plans. At the same time he began compiling answers to his telegraphic request to members of Congress for their views on inflation. He plans to lay them before President Roosevelt.

Cotton Men to Attend.

Senators and members of the House from every cotton State, Thomas said, along with cotton growers, brokers and others in the trade, will attend the conference, advocated among others by Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the Agriculture Committee. Thomas said he expects a committee to be chosen to "wait on President Roosevelt and present the inflation plan and program."

Mr. Roosevelt and his advisors are silent on the inflation issue recently brought to the forefront by appeals from Congressional advocates, including Senators Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, chairman of the Banking Committee, and Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, chairman of the Finance Committee.

Expansion Urged.

The latter, with Thomas and others, are urging currency and credit expansion designed to lift agriculture price levels, stabilize monetary values and enhance general economic conditions, emphasizing a need for "more money in circulation and less stored in the banks."

Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic House leader, wired Thomas yesterday that he had telegraphed President Roosevelt urging currency expansion.

Of more than 20 replies received by Thomas yesterday, only 2 opposed inflation, Senator Hatfield (Republican), West Virginia, and Representative Eltse (Republican), California. Fifty-six replies were received by Thomas Saturday, 53 favoring inflation, 2 against and 1 noncommittal.

NRA to Control Prices in Stores

the hundreds of thousands of stores not members of trade associations into agencies that can exercise trade practice control.

Johnson, searching for a "crackerjack trade association man," hoped to get to work on this task shortly, with his trade organizer to be charged with helping all unorganized establishments into associations or other similar agencies.

The National Labor Board reported it had settled 19 labor disputes in the last three weeks, involving nearly 400 firms. Senator Wagner, (Democrat), New York, chairman, said most of these cases involved strikes, some of long duration.

Wagner estimated that about 200,000 employes have been returned to work or kept from striking since the President established the board August 5.

Several important hearings on codes are due this week, with the radio broadcasting industry up Wednesday, along with agricultural implements. Today is the opening day of public sessions on the commercial printing, publishing printing industry trade plan.

Can manufacturers come in on Wednesday, and on Friday the NRA starts hearings on the newspaper code submited by the American Newspaper Publishers Association. Office equipment manufacturers open hearings Thursday, along with periodical publishers.

Cave Lined With Gold Ore Found Among Hills of Nevada

Prospector Stumbles on Mine Already Dug by Mother Nature.

Painted Hills, Nev., Sept. 17 (U.P.).—The mine that nature dug—a cave lined with gold ore—was discovered today.

It lies in the hills between this crossroads and Sand Springs. Thousands of tons of gold ore lie on the cave's floor, it was said.

Half a century ago Hank Knight, mystery man of the desert, sunk a shaft 50 feet deep into a volcanic vent, and in following a streak of ore, broke into a cave. But Knight died and with him went the secret of the mine's location.

Forbes, wandering through the alkali wastes with his donkey, found the ready-made mine in the Painted Hills northwest of Sand Mountain. The floor of the cave is lined with limonite and quartz, carrying free gold. Three assays taken from material which evidently fell from the cave's hanging wall, were valued at $1,160 a ton.

The sides also are lined with precious ore, Forbes said.

(Copyright, 1933, by United Press.)

New York, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—The trading community tonight was in the grip of inflation fever awaiting opening of the stock market tomorrow.

In New York and in the suburbs, where traders and brokers rested over the week-end, inflation was the chief topic of conversation. The price of gold, rising commodities, silver demand and public participaton were discussed.

The roaring finish to Saturday's short session, which many had expected to be dull, gave incentive to the inflation fever.

Rumors Fly Fast.

Among the rumors were:

An important bank had advised some of its important clients it would lend money for purchases of copper, silver, oats and wheat. That the Government was buying a considerable amount of silver and would issue silver certificates against the purchase. That forthcoming debt negotiations would find silver an important factor.

There were some stable factors behind reasoning for a market advance tomorrow. Among these might be listed:

Motor car sales continue to improve. Lehmann Brothers report that the first 27 reporting chain stores show for August a 5.7 per cent increase over the same month in 1932.

Car loadings probably will pick up this week.

Construction contracts in August picked up over July by 28 per cent, according to F. W. Dodge & Co.'s estimate.

Other Sides to Picture.

But there were other sides to the picture, also. This side revealed:

Steel scrap declining in Pittsburgh. Weakness maintains in utilities with demands for rate reduction. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics in Washington reported that the prices received by farmers had declined since mid-August.

The street talked about:

Good buying behind American Can based on belief the stock was behind the market on basis of its earnings. . . . Communications earnings showing improvement with selling in International Telephone based on a misconception of the company's business in Cuba, which is only a small part of its total. . . . Crosley Radio output being planned at 3,000 daily with the company showing a backlog of 30,000 seats. . . . Strength in metal shares. . . . Silver futures. . . . Oats futures on basis of increased demand will diminish the cereal. . . . Continued strength in motor shares and motor equipment issues.

Mail Contract Bids Sought.

Blackstone, Va., Sept. 17 (Spl.). Sealed bids will be received by the postmaster, Blackstone, Va., for the next 10 days, for contract for carrying the United States mail between the postoffice and Norfolk & Western Railway passenger station.

S. C. Tobacco Holiday Ended by Governor

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 17 (AP). Gov. Blackwood tonight declared the voluntary tobacco holiday in South Carolina concluded tomorrow at midnight since an acreage reduction campaign has been "successfully waged."

Announcement of the reopening here a week ahead of those in North Carolina was made by Charles H. Gerald, secretary of the governor.

Cuban Unrest Turn Expected Next 24 Hours

(Associated Press.)

Prepared for any eventuality, American diplomatic chiefs last night stood by in expectation of a momentary clarification of the Cuban situation.

It was known State Department and other officials attached importance to conversations in Havana between factions. The turn was expected within 24 hours.

The consensus in informed quarters was that should the Grau San Martin government be accorded support of stronger groups an early retsoration of peace might result, accompanied by American recognition.

May Land Forces.

On the other hand, should the revolutionary government not prove strong enough to consolidate other groups, it was held the possibility would be greatly enhanced that American bluejackets and marines would be forced to land.

Ambassador Welles was known to be following the activities of the Cuban leaders.

Jefferson Caffery, Assistant Secretary of State, made known labor troubles were general on the sugar plantations. About 70 per cent of the sugar production in Cuba is backed by Americans. Labor strikes on plantations was said not to be directed at American owners because of their nationality.

Serious Unrest Reported.

Serious unrest was reported by Caffery around Camaguey. Another trouble spot, he said, was Antilla.

Private advices related the Grau San Martin government was bothered by an empty treasury. Although some pay was said to have been given to the army, money was lacking for other obligations.

While a regiment of Marines continued in readiness at Quantico members of the Army general staff reported that their troops could be dispatched to the South without a moment's loss of time.

Injury Halts Wheeler Trip

Senator Stays in Room, Hopes to Continue Tomorrow.

Glasgow, Mont. Sept. 17 (AP). Senator B. K. Wheeler, Montana, still was suffering tonight from severe headaches and a knee injury resulting from a motor car accident yesterday.

He remained in his hotel room, but planned to continue his trip to Washington Tuesday. Meawhile scores of telegrams arrived expressing regret over the mishap and many persons in various parts of the country telephoned to ask about the senator's condition.

Mrs. Wheeler, their two sons and daughter were less seriously injured when the senator's car was overturned by a tire blowout.

When he reaches Washington, Senator Wheeler will confer with President Roosevelt about remonetization of silver and public works projects. He believed remonetization at present would greatly aid the administration's recovery program by making credit available and enabling employers to meet NRA requirements.

Flood Lake Proposed to Cover Limberlost, Scene of Novels

Indiana-Ohio Swamp Area Involved in Wabash River Project.

Geneva, Ind., Sept. 17 (AP).—The Limberlost, made famous by the writings of Gene Stranton Porter, may be turned into a lake as a result of the efforts of Mrs. Virginia Jenckes, Indiana's Congresswoman, to keep the Wabash river within its banks.

While an $18,00,000 flood control plan for the Wabash is being urged in Washington, officials of the Limberlost Memorial Association are taking the lead here in urging that one of the dams in the project be built at headwaters of the river here.

The Limberlost, or "Loblolly Region," as it is often known, is a swampy area in Adams and Jay Counties near the Ohio border. According to geologists, it was a mighty canyon in ancient times, through which waters of the Wabash flowed.

But some phenomenon of nature dammed up the river, and the waters were diverted. The canyon became a lake, and then as it gradually filled up, the lake became a morass with a chain of five small lakes in the center. The latter transformation has been within the memory of some of the older residents.

Under these strange conditions, Fauna and Flora different from that found elseswhere in Indiana and Ohio grew. Mrs. Porter's descriptions of nature in her roamings made the region famous.

Burnstine Adds Another Bridge Cup to Cabinet

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—David Burnstine, New York bridge teacher and writer, tonight added the individual master's gold cup to his bulging trophy closet.

The case already contained cups emblematic of the masters' pair, national team-of-four, Eastern team, national auction pair and auction team championships, a collection probably unrivalled in the history of bridge tournaments.

Burnstine won the Vanderbilt Cup years ago as a member of the old "Four Horsemen." With his annexation of the master's title he became the first ever to have held the three major bridge crowns—the Vanderbilt, individual master's and masters' pair.

Burnstine ranked twelfth in the fifth and concluding session of the three-day tournament tonight, but the points he rolled up in previous sessions, three of which he led, gave him the championship by a good margin. His point total was 619½.

Center of Storm Moves Northeast

Seven-Foot Tide Hits.

Seven feet of tidal water rose into New Bern from the Neuse and Trent Rivers as the storm reached its peak. It was accompanied by a hurricane wind that blew down houses and uprooted buildings and uprooted huge trees.

Sweeping the expanse of the rivers, which fork here, the gale lifted a hundred yards or more of the Neuse River bridge and sent it sailing almost intact into the water.

Four Carolina Deaths.

Beaufort, N. C., Sept. 17 (U.P.). Four persons lost their lives near here Friday night in the hurricane and flood, according to reports reaching Beaufort today.

The North Carolina Coastal Area death toll was increased to six with this report. A seventh is missing.

The dead:

Two young daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Dixon, of Merrimon.

Mrs. Ella A. Delmar, 51, of South River.

Elijah Dixon and his family sought refuge upstairs when angry waters swirled through the first floor of their home. Rising water toppled the building into Back Creek.

His two daughters were swept to their death. Dixon, his wife and young son clung to bits of wreckage until they lodged against a pine tree, to which they hung for 24 hours.

Herbie Carraway's 17-year-old daughter was crushed to death when her uncle's home was razed by the wind.

Mrs. Delmar drowned in the home of her brother, Sam Gaskill, when South River overflowed its banks.

Island Calls for Help.

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 17 (U.P.).—A radio call for immediate assistance for the inhabitants of Roanoke Island in the storm torn area was intercepted here tonight.

The call was sent from a station at Morehead City to the Coast Guard cutter 279, requesting it to rush to the assistance of several persons on the island who were reported to be injured.

Operators were barely able to read the message, repeated nine times, because of static..

The call also appeared to have been asking Red Cross aid from Pamlico, where workers are now trying to prevent spread of disease.

Tonight a violent electrical storm was reported raging on Roanoke Island, isolated since the storm broke across it Friday night.

Six Reported Dead.

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 17 (AP).—An unconfirmed report that six persons lost their lives near Oriental, in Pamlico County, in the hurricane that swept North Carolina's eastern coast was received here tonight by E. P. Krick, American Red Cross worker.

(Associated Press.)

The Weather Bureau yesterday issued the following storm warning:

"Advisory, 9 a. m., coast storm central about 150 miles east of Atlantic City. Moving north eastward with little change in intensity. Still attended by gales over considerable area and by winds of hurricane over small area.

"Caution advised vessels in and near path. Gale warnings displayed Provincetown, Mass., to Nantucket, Mass., and storm warnings elsewhere from Eastport, Me., to New London, Conn., and small craft warnings south of New London to Atlantic City."

Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 17 (U.P.). The question of whether anti-Jewish manifestations in Germany are within the scope of the conference was laid before the minorities peoples convention here today.

The presentative of a group of Jews attending the conference argued that the conference should condemn Germany's treatment of Jews.

Mexico Death Toll in Storm Now Over 100

Delayed Messages Bring New Reports of Scores Dead, Property Loss.

Mexico City, Sept. 17 (AP).—From the battered and ravaged interior of Mexico trickled delayed dispatches today carrying a mounting toll of death and damage. Latest reports said more than 100 had been killed.

The hurricane that struck Tampico Friday swept inland for 300 miles, and burst a dam in the Santiago River at the city of San Luis Potosi, drowning at least 80 and possibly 100 persons trapped in their homes. Late reports from Tampico accounted for 37 dead and more than 150 injured. Previously, the death toll at Tampico had been reported at 11.

La Pentilla, a suburb of Tampico through which the River Panuco passes, was submerged, water rising in 700 houses and stores. Many buildings were smashed.

Rescued As Ship Sinks.

Twenty-eight passengers and members of the crew of El Golfo, a mail steamer, were reported rescued as the vessel sank. Dispatches described horrible scenes in which some of those rescued attempted to commit suicide by shooting themselves.

Several skiffs attempted to cross the Panuco River and eight persons were drowned. The fishing launch Cecilia crashed on the rocks. The crew attempted to swim ashore. Three were drowned and five saved. A launch en route to Tampico was swamped within sight of the custom house. Four passengers and three of the crew were drowned.

Two tugboats, anchored in port, sank, drowning four watchmen. Life-saving crews reported dragging from Lake Carpintero, near the River Temesi, 15 bodies. Tampico was isolated. Communications were interrupted. No planes alighted and no railroad facilities were available.

Many Flee Rising Water.

At San Luis Potosi the water poured into a low section of the city, trapping many in their homes. Others fled. Refugees were being cared for in the municipal building and in a theater.

The number of homeless could not be estimated today, but last night had reached a reported total of several thousand. Property losses were reported to run into the millions. The banana crop at Tuxpan, south of Tampico, was reported destroyed at a loss of $2,000,000.

Rex Humphrey, commander of the Wayne County Council of the Legion, said that residence in the Detroit metropolitan area, an honorable discharge, a good record and need would be necessary.

Three hundred men are to be hired daily until the quota of 5,000 has been filled.

Crash Victim's Condition Is Critical After Smash

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 17 (AP). The condition of Lloyd Strang, 25, of Toledo, Ohio, who was injured when his automobile overturned near here last night, remained critical today as members of his family reached his side.

Strang regained consciousness long enough to have his sister, Mrs. R. L. Oligatti, of Chattanooga, and his mother, Mrs. S. B. Strang, of Long Island, Ala., notified.

Five From Cincinnati Hurt in Auto Mishap

Lindy Visits Family Estate On Home Trip

"Forward My Letters to Broadway," He Says at Stockholm.

Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 17 (U.P.). "Just forward my letters to Broadway, New York."

With this remark, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife slipped out of Stockholm today and headed southward in their seaplane along the coast of Sweden in the first leg of their journey back to the United States.

The Lindberghs flew in an hour and 30 minutes to Karlskrona, a naval base near the southern tip of Sweden, 240 miles from Stockholm, in the Baltic Sea.

Evades Publicity.

Arriving there, they motored to Smedstorp, home of Lindbergh's grandfather, where a woman cousin of the flier's lives. They planned to return to Karlskrona in a few hours. Their sudden departure from Stockholm apparently was a ruse to enable them to visit Smedstorp without a demonstration.

Lindbergh cancelled a visit to Smedstorp last week when he learned a corps of newspapermen and press photographers had gathered to meet him.

In characteristic fashion, the Lindberghs departed without ceremony. Only a few close friends and United States Embassy officials were at Hagernaes, the Swedish naval station 20 miles from Stockholm, when they left. Both were in splendid spirits, but Lindbergh, as usual, was reticent about their program.

"I can't let you know our destination," he said with a smile. "We don't want any reception or demonstration on our arrival."

To Tour Europe.

Lindbergh taxied his plane out onto the harbor and warmed up the motor for about 10 minutes. Mrs. Lindbergh clambered in beside him, and with a roar the ship moved off into a stiff breeze. He lifted the blunt nose into the air after a short sprint, and turned back, banking low over the water as they both waved farewell. Then, turning down along the coast, their famous machine disappeared toward the south.

He indicated they would tour Europe before placing their seaplane aboard ship and returning to New York.

Ireland Strife Laid to Britain

(Copyright, 1933, by the United Press.)

Dublin, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Eamon de Valera, fiery President of the Irish Free State, today bluntly placed the blame for the recurrent political strife in Ireland at the door of England.

In an interview, he declared the British government has been trying to foster a political movement which will blast the Fianna Fail—his party—out of power and put in an administration "ready to accept any terms Britain might dictate."

He made these charges in answer to questions regarding the new fusion party headed by Gen. Eoin O'Duffy.

De Valera expressed gratification at the fusion movement and almost jubilantly accepted the challenge to his power and popularity.

"The Blue Shirts intend to become the military wing of the so-called United England party," the president said, "ready to seize power if the political wing fails. The government ruthlessly will suppress any military movement."

Thurles, Ireland, Sept. 17 (U.P.). A bitter attack on the government was made tonight by Gen. Eoin O'Duffy, leader of the new United Ireland party.

Lamson Plans Appeal Battle Against Noose

Prosecution Accused of Legal Misconduct as Verdict Is Flayed.

San Jose, Calif., Sept. 17 (AP).—Convicted of wife murder and facing death on the gallows, David Lamson, 31-year-old Stanford University Publishing House executive, today clung to the hope of being saved by an appeal.

Late last night Lamson walked into the courtroom of Superior Judge Robert R. Syer and heard a jury of seven men and five women decree him "guilty as charged" of beating to death his pretty wife, Allene Thorpe Lamson, in their cottage on the university campus last Memorial Day.

The State charged a love triangle was the motive.

E. O. Heinrich, Berkeley criminologist, who was the mainstay of the defense, termed the verdict a "serious miscarriage of justice."

Verdict Termed Unjust.

Because Heinrich examined the bathroom in which Mrs. Lamson was slain after the room had been cleaned, the court ruled out much of the evidence he wished to present because of his "remoteness from the crime.

"The physical evidence was in absolute conflict with the verdict," Heinrich said, "but under a ruling of the court I was not allowed to bring this evidence to the attention of the jury.

Next Tuesday Lamson again will walk into the court room to hear himself sentenced to death on the gallows, then another legal battle will begin, an appeal to the District Court of Appeals and perhaps later to the Supreme Court of California.

Appeal Fight Drafted.

The appeal will be based, defense counsel said, on charges of legal misconduct by assistant district attorneys, on the alleged insufficiency of evidence and on asserted errors in decisions by Judge Syer.

The academic calm of Palo Alto, 15 miles from here, the site of Stanford University, was shattered by the verdict. Friendships have been disrupted and academic circles were divided in two camps.

Milk Pickets Halt Activities

Farmers Again Send Truck Shipments Into Illinois.

Chicago, Sept. 17 (AP).—Pickets were missing today from most of the northern Illinois counties where for four days milk shipments have been halted. E. L. Bost, strike leader, refused to say if the strike had been called off but, at Woodstock, seat of the strike, 250 farmers voted to ship milk as usual.

The strike was opposed by the Pure Milk Association, bargaining agency for 18,000 farmers supplying the Chicago shed.

The association approved a plan to boost prices to 11 cents a quart to give the farmer an increase of from $1.75 per hundredweight to about $2.20. Final approval rests with the Secretary of Agriculture.

Code Is Demanded For Lakes Seamen

Complaint Asks President to Require Action.

Chicago, Sept. 17 (AP).—Representatives of four seamen's unions today forwarded complaint to President Roosevelt charging the Lake Carriers Association, an organization of Great Lakes ship owners, with "unnecessary" delay in drafting a code for the shipping industry. The complaint said:

"Thousands of seamen are without work and unless the Lake Carriers Association is compelled to present a code we believe there is no hope for these men to scure jobs." The President was aked to "insist on the association presenting a code."

10,000 Picketers Called To Combat Reopening

Paterson, N. J., Sept. 17 (AP). Strike leaders tonight issued a call for 10,000 picketers to go out tomorrow and picket every silk mill in the city in answer to the manufacturers' announcement that mills will reopen tomorrow morning.

Tomorrow is regarded as the crucial day in the strike, which began last week, when leaders called out all workers in protest against the NRA tentative silk code made effective, pending the establishment of a permanent code.

Chicago Judges Try 470 Cases in August

Chicago, Sept. 17 (AP).—The city's judiciary looked back today over accomplishments in August—first month of the current crime drive—and noted that four times as many cases were disposed of as in that month last year.

Statistics showed that in August, 1933, judges erased 470 cases from crowded dockets compared with disposal of but 110 in August of 1932.

Johnson vs. Johnson For California Seat

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 17 (AP).—Carl Alexander Johnson, San Diego attorney, today announced he will be a Democratic candidate for the United States Senate seat held by Hiram Johnson. The San Diegan is well known, having been a Democratic candidate for governor.

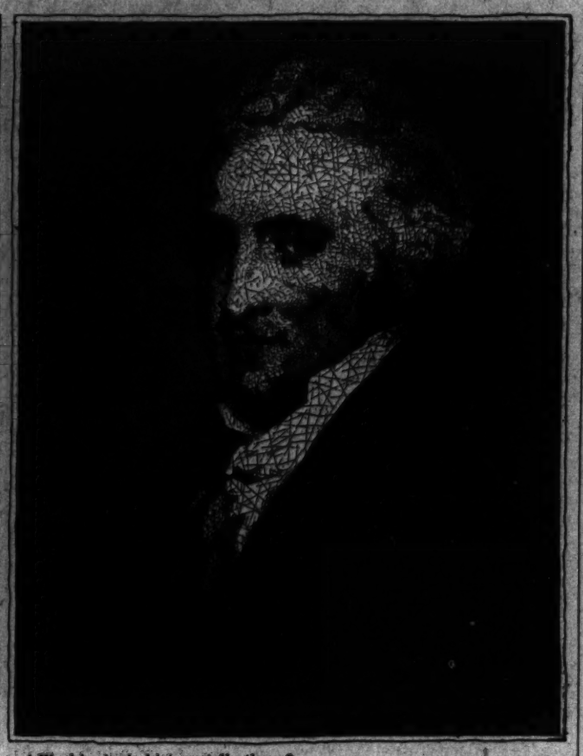
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

John Van Ness and Marcia Burnes



One of the most appealing chapters of Washington's history tells the romance of Marcia Burnes, its "first belle," and Gen. John Van Ness, a congressman from New York. Possessed of wealth as well as beauty and culture, Marcia Burnes Van Ness became the city's first outstanding philanthropist and lived a full, rich life until her death in 1832. Her husband, who survived her by a few years, became one of the early mayors of Washington.

Handsome Prince Charming Gave Up Congressional Seat for Bride.

The City of Washington, far into its second century, is beginning to be tradition-conscious and is anxious to preserve the story of its early days. In this notable story there is no more lovely page than that on which is written the romantic story of Marcia Burnes—its first belle.

Yet there are other reasons that this city should regard with particular favor the story of Marcia Burnes, who was married to Gen. John Van Ness, a member of Congress from New York. For Marcia Burnes Van Ness was Washington's first philanthropist as well as its first belle.

The nearest approach to belledom in the site of what is now the National Capital might be claimed by a predecessor of Marcia Burnes Van Ness in colonial days, a certain "Queen of Pamunkey," widow of Totapotamoi, a woman of commanding appearance and of intellectual powers, remarkable in her race, who often visited the Indian tribe whose encampment was located on what is now Anacostia, across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac. She came nearest to the heroine that Virginia enjoys in the romantic Pocahontas and her incalculable services to Jamestown.

Dad Owned Half of City.

The Revolution did not present a feminine figure of special note within these particular 10 square miles now the seat of a world capital. So at the very forefront of the pageant of notable Washington women we must place the lovely figure of Marcia Burnes, daughter of old Davy Burnes, a Scotchman who owned the land on which the White House now stands and half of what is now Washington besides.

Their home was a pictureques little cottage on the site of what is now the Pan American Union Building and the beautiful Memorial Continental Hall, headquarters of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

At that time the sleepy waters of the Tiber were at the foot of the Burnes land. The little cottage was not pretentious. Davy took too good care of his shillings and was known as one of the most solid citizens of the countryside. Yet while he drove a sharp bargain, he was a just, fair and religious man.

Marcia Well Schooled.

Little Marcia, dark-eyed and vivacious and bonny like most Scotch lassies, played with the birds, the butterflies, her dogs and other pets on ground that was to become historic in the years that were to be. Her first letters were taught her by her mother and then came books and further instruction from teachers who lived with them in the cottage. Quick, amiable and anxious for information, Marcia did so well at her books that Davy Burnes, who dearly loved her despite his sternness, decided she must have better educational advantages than were possible to obtain at home or nearby.

He knew, too, that Marcia would be a great heiress, as wealth was counted in that day. Perhaps he dreamed of an alliance for her with one of the proud Virginia families whose coach and four made clouds of dust as it rolled along the old post road from Mount Vernon, Stratford and even the baronial homes near Richmond. Anyway, he had the sagacity to realize she must be prepared for a higher destiny than she would know as "Davy Burnes' daughter."

Sent to Baltimore.

So, when she was 16, she was sent to a fashionable school in Baltimore. The little cottage seemed desolate without the sunshine of her smile, but Davy Burnes heard good reports from her teachers and he comforted his wife with the assurance that Marcia would soon be with them again, "a fine, educated lady."

On her part, Marcia, no doubt, missed the freedom, the flowers, the birds and the pets of her father's home. But the comradeship of young girls meant much to her and, by this time, thoughts of beaux and a Prince Charming occupied her pretty head to the exclusion of French verbs and geographical facts.

Meantime, Davy Burnes was earning from George Washington the title of "the obstinate Mr. Burnes," who was holding out against the sale of his broad acres for use as a site for the Capital. It is told that Washington, laboring to get Burnes to sell at a reasonable figure, finally lost a bit of his own temper and said that he owed something to the city since the location of the Capital there was enabling him to enrich himself by the sale of his acres.

Retort Is History.

Not at all abashed by Washington's greatness and high position, Davy snapped back in his broadest Scotch: "Aye, mon. An' had ye no' married the Widow Custis wi' her naygurs, you'd a' been a surveyor the day—an' a michty poor one."

Having vanquished Washington, as he thought, with his remark, the next morning Mr. Burnes set his name down on the agreement to sell.

When Marcia Burnes came dancing home from her Baltimore school with her diploma in her hand, it was to find her father with new ducats in his treasure chest and a world capital in the making about her beloved fields and surveyors and architects plotting out new streets where her childhood games had been played.

There was excitement in the air and Marcia, now grown up—as she thought—found compensation for the change in familiar scenes from the ardent attentions of young gallants, who attracted by both her beauty and her father's wealth, flocked about her.

Comes Prince Charming.

In the quaint little town of Kinderhook, on the Hudson, in New York, a certain John Van Ness, of splendid Dutch ancestry, was preparing for his life work in national affairs. Well connected, with a handsome person and affable manners, he was popular and admired. Many a beauty of the Empire State sighed at the mention of his name.

But he was indifferent to their charms. In fact, he was fair to become an "old bachelor" in the opinion of his family and friends, when belle after belle failed to charm him. John Van Ness was too busy with his dreams of political fame to care what was said about his failure as a matrimonial prospect. His eyes were on the new Capital at Washington and his ambition was to serve his district in Congress.

While John Van Ness was preparing for his public service, Marcia Burnes was facing the loss of a most indulgent father. On May 7, 1799, just a few months before Washington was to breathe his last, Davy Burnes died, leaving vast possessions to his widow and his daughter, Marcia, who thereby won a new title, "Heiress of Washington."

Cling to Their Cottage.

They remained in the Davy Burnes cottage on the banks of the Tiber on the west side of Seventeenth street. Marcia had beauty, accomplishments and money—three assets then as now in the matter of a brilliant marriage. When Marcia was 20, in 1802, a rather late age in those days for a girl to remain unmarried, Prince Charming John Van Ness came to Congress. He was eager to win honors in this new field.

Some friend took him to call on Miss Burnes. All of the Hon. Mr. Van Ness' good resolutions in regard to not permitting romance to interfere with his career flew at once. The way to the altar was not long, for in May, 1802, the Davy Burnes cottage was gay with flowers, and wedding bells chimed out for the popular member of Congress and the heiress of Washington.

That summer Representative Van Ness became interested in the militia forming in the Capital and accepted an appointment as major. He never dreamed it would constitute holding two offices under the Government and he might lose his Congressional seat thereby. When the second session of the Seventh Congress was convened he answered the roll call and entered upon the discharge of his duties.

Loses Seat in Congress.

A few weeks later, the House decided that Mr. Van Ness, holding a second office "under the United States" as major in the District militia was not qualified to retain his seat in Congress. Strangely enough, Mr. Van Ness did not offer in the discussion to resign what was merely an honorary post as major in order to retain his Congressional honors. It is evident that his marriage had determined his future, which was to be in the District instead of in the State of his birth.

In 1807, Mrs. Burnes died and Marcia and her husband decided to leave the little cottage. The place was rented and its sturdy frame survived more than three-quarters of a century and then was torn down.

A new home was built by them, one that was regarded as among the most beautiful of American homes. A historian has said: "The Van Ness mansion had a portecochere, an elegance the Executive Mansion still lacked, and hot and cold water might be had in any bedroom by merely turning a tap.

Lavish Throughout.

"No other house in the country was thus equipped, and drawing rooms and kitchens and wine cellars were on a correspondingly lavish scale. People wondered how old David felt about the extravagance, if such news found its way across the Styx. Latrobe was the architect. Rumor whispered that L'Enfant had offered his professional services, which were politely but firmly declined." The house was on the south side of D street next west to the corner of Twelfth street northwest, long since vanished in trade edifices.

Mrs. Van Ness did not confine her activities to society and house building, however. She gave $4,000 to start an orphans' asylum in the city and was its chief directress, arousing wide interest for it.

Notables of the day came to visit them, Washington Irving, President Monroe, Chief Justice Marshall, Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun, Gen. Andrew Jackson and Daniel Webster being frequent visitors.

Lady Bountiful.

Known as the Lady Bountiful of the Capital, Marcia Burnes Van Ness went herself into the homes of the suffering and the very poor, her deeds of charity numberless. The plight of orphan and desolate children especially appealed to her, particularly after the death of her own child, a blow from which she never recovered. She got an act of incorporation from Congress for her orphan asylum and a donation of $10,000 from the same body.

In 1832, Mrs. Van Ness fell a victime to "the prevailing malady," a polite name for the cholera then ravaging the Capital. She was buried with public honors, the only woman to which this tribute has ever been accorded in Washington.

Gen. Van Ness survived her by a number of years and became one of the early mayors of the city.

Rum Control On Model Plan Hope of Illinois

Drinking of Hard Liquor at Place of Sale Will Be Forbidden.

Chicago, Sept. 17 (AP).—An Illinois commission today was engaged in evolving a bill for liquor control that it hopes will be a "model law" for the rest of the Nation after the projected repeal of prohibition.

Commission members, after listening to witnesses for a week, apparently were convinced the State's legislation must forbid sale of hard liquor in saloons, and that consumption must be prevented at the place of sale.

Such a position, said Col. Ira Reeves, divisional head of the Crusaders, antiprohibition organization, is sound. He advocated that all hard liquor sales be by the bottle and that taxes be minimized to keep consumers' prices down so as not to make bootlegging profitable. He recommended serious study of the Quebec plan to the commission.

From others came the suggestion that the model plan must take private profit from the sale of whisky.

"The State should fix a tax low enough to discourage illicit sales and outlaw them in public opinion," he said. "At the same time the tax on beer and its sale should be sharply reduced with a view to encouraging its sale as a substitute for distilled liquors. Perhaps, it may be possible to establish a graduated tax on beer, extremely low for beers of the present alcoholic content and rising slightly as the alcoholic content is increased."

Reeves said that the model law should permit any community which doesn't want hard liquors sold within its confines to keep it out.

Gold Hoarders' Deadline Due

(Associated Press.)

With the time limit for filing returns by gold hoarders expiring at midnight tonight, the Treasury announced yesterday it would entertain requests for extensions from individuals unable to comply because of circumstances beyond their control.

An official of the department explained, meanwhile, that no relaxation was intended of regulations issued under President Roosevelt's executive order of August 28 requiring all persons holding more than $100 in gold certificates, coin or bullion to report to the Government.

However, if a gold hoarder has valid reasons for postponing the filing of his return and no attempted evasion of the President's order is involved, his case will receive every consideration.

A principal purpose of the order is to facilitate prosecutions of gold hoarders who have refused to yield to the Government's requests they turn holdings over to Federal Reserve Banks.

Using persuasion, Justice Department agents have succeeded in reducing the number of known hoarders from 5,000 to 342 and the amount of gold turned in has aggregated more than $39,000,000.

Attorney General Cummings is anxious to continue this method, but has said he would not hesitate to employ more forceful measures.

-:- The Federal Diary -:- By Morgan Baker -:-

(Trade-mark Applied For)

THRILLED by their experiences, two happy Federal workers arrived home last night from Chicago's Century of Progress.

There were smiles lighting the faces of Miss Beulah Myles and Francis O. Panneton, winners of The Federal Diary's trip to the exposition devoted to civilization's march, as they stepped from their plane at Washington's airport. They were smiles that banished tired feet and tramp-weary legs. They were those happy, home-again grins that were certain to flash for fellow workers today 'midst tales of the fair.

"The trip was perfect—just perfect," they assured friends. It was so good, Mr. Panneton, who was voted "most popular man," confessed, that he spent his last minutes in a hasty inspection of the whole exposition to be sure he missed nothing.

"I'm sure I saw it all," he said with a laugh, "even though I did have to pack my suitcase in a rush."

Lunch at 10,000 Feet.

The party met about 2 o'clock for dinner and at 4 a motor called at the Bismarck Hotel, where the contestants stayed while in Chicago and took them to the Chicago airport. The trimotored plane of the United Air Lines took off at 6 p. m. Finding the air bumpy, the pilot rose to 10,000 feet. Soon the very charming little hostess served a lunch of sandwiches, pickles, olives, candy, and coffee.

Arriving in Cleveland in an hour and a half, the party transferred to a Pennsylvania Air Lines plane, piloted by H. L. Smith, Copilot C. W. Weiblem. It was dark by this time and everyone was almost overcome by the beauty of the country by night from the air.

The Thrill of Home.

At 10 o'clock the lights of Washington were first seen away off in the distance and the biggest thrill of the whole trip came when the plane came near enough to the city for various old landmarks to be recognized.

After circling high over the city so everyone could have a chance to see the old home town, the plane came to rest 1 hour and 20 minutes after leaving Pittsburgh.

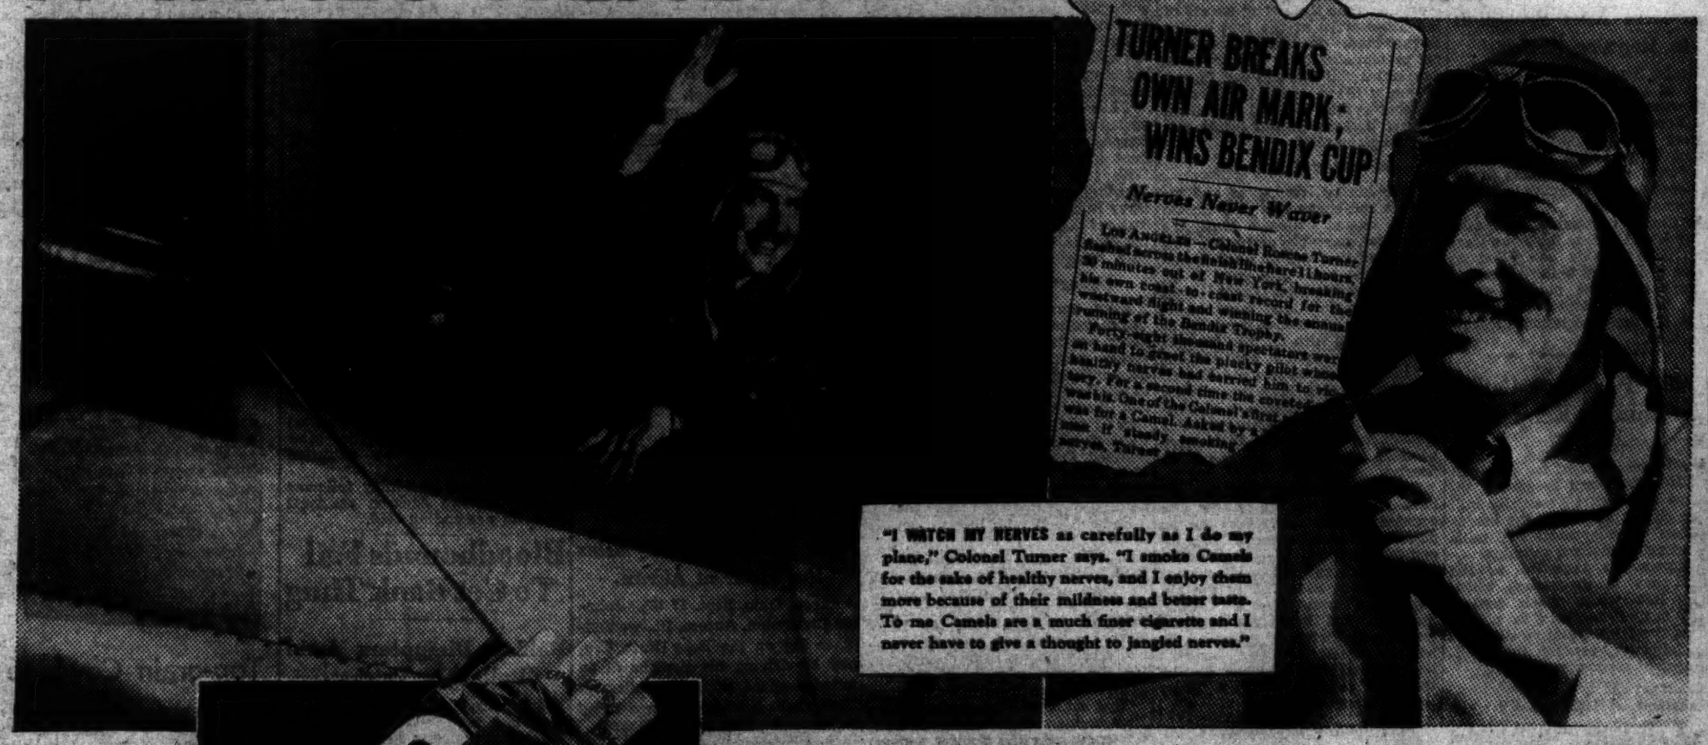
IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES—



TURNER BREAKS OWN AIR MARK; WINS BENDIX CUP

Nerves Never Waver

"I WATCH MY NERVES as carefully as I do my plane," Colonel Turner says. "I smoke Camels for the sake of healthy nerves, and I enjoy them more because of their mildness and better taste. To me Camels are a much finer cigarette and I never have to give a thought to jangled nerves."

A MATCHLESS BLEND

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

COLONEL ROSCOE TURNER, in discussing healthy nerves and cigarettes, says:

"Breaking air records is an exciting business—and a nerve-wracking one! I know because I have gone out after a whole flock of records—and managed to pick off quite a few. Like most pilots I smoke a lot—in fact, I enjoy smoking any time. But I watch my nerves as carefully as I do my plane. I smoke Camels for the sake of healthy nerves, and I enjoy them more because of their mildness and better taste. To me Camels are a much finer cigarette, and being a faithful Camel smoker, I never have to give a thought to jangled nerves."

* * *

Are you nervous? Irritable? Try Camels and get a fresh slant on your smoking. Being a milder cigarette, Camels are better for steady smoking. You will find that Camels never get on your nerves...never tire your taste.

Cotton Group Here to Press Crop Demands

Minimum 15-Cent Price and Tax Abandonment Will Be Studied.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Wallace and his assistants last night prepared for conferences today with delegations from the cotton States whose aim is the aim of the Farm Adjustment Administration—15 cent cotton.

The methods suggested by the incoming groups, however, have evoked no rousing cheers from the farm officials.

The proposal by the Southern representatives include abandonment of the cotton processing tax, fixing the 1934 crop at 9,000,000 bales, setting a minimum price of 15 cents a pound for cotton; and expansion of the currency. All these suggestions have been made to the Farm Administration and rejected. Privately, officials say they feel those farmers who have urged lifting the tax do not understand the situation or have been misled by propaganda.

George N. Peek, administrator of the farm act, has said investigations showed the tax amounts to very little on the finished cotton product. Recommendation for the fixing of minimum prices for the principal farm products thus far have met with a decided disapproval of Wallace. The Secretary and his legal assistants also doubt the Farm Administration has power to fix minimum prices except through marketing agreements.

The proposal that the crop next year be limited to 9,000,000 bales through gin control has been studied by the department and rejected.

The request for currency expansion lies outside the province of the Farm Administration. It undertook a campaign, which resulted in the plowing under of 10,000,000 acres. In spite of this, the crop this year will yield about 12,400,000 bales, almost the average crop.

Flappers Are Poor Parents, Says 'Modern Life' Writer

Baltimore, Sept. 17 (AP).—The 12-year-old daughter of F. Scott Fitzgerald, whose novel "This Side of Paradise" made America flapper-conscious, thinks the girls and boys about whom her father wrote are incompetent parents today.

And Fitzgerald is inclined to agree.

"Maybe I'm getting old-fashioned," he said. "You know—Old Man Fitzgerald telling what's wrong with the world. But in most sections my crowd isn't doing so well as mothers and fathers."

"They don't seem to think about their children," said Frances Scott Fitzgerald, the daughter. "They think the children are going to be taught everything at school."

"How about the fathers?" Frances was asked.

"They don't see them very often." She hesitated. "Except when they come home and say go upstairs and be quiet or play on the other side of the house."

"Do children your age respect their parents?"

"Want to Help."

"They respect them, I guess. It's just that they don't know them well. Parents are interested in their children, I think, but—well, they seem to want to help them but don't know how."

One thing she was driving at," said Fitzgerald after his daughter had left to skate with her mother, "is that my contemporaries have found their lack of religious and moral convictions makes them incompetent to train children."

"Flappers turned out better than boys their age," he said. "They missed the war, but blame everything that's wrong on the war. It's an unhappy generation."

Eyes Next Crop.

"How do you like the 1933 counterpart of your 1916-18 flapper?"

"I don't know anything about her. Right now I am interested in the next crop of prom girls. They have former flappers for mothers and are having pretty sorry treatment.

"I'm no model father, but I'm an interested one. I hope that 'Scottie' won't do the things I thought were pretty flashy 15 years ago."

Dr. Pierce Sees Heaven's Help Always Ready

Sustenance to Come as It Came to Elijah Pastor Says.

The Rev. Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian Church, yesterday preached his first sermon since returning from a vacation in New England and Canada.

"In time of need the angel of the Lord will always come, as he came to Elijah, to bring men new inspiration, new vigor and new enthusiasm," Dr. Pierce told a large congregation.

"We are constantly transmuting the meat and bread of life into a Plato's symposium, a Handel's Largo, a Raphael's Madonna, a life of unselfish devotion," he continued.

"But without replenishment, our resources are soon exhausted. We are tempted to sit down under a juniper tree and weep.

"We, however, can find food for every need. Sustenance will come, as it did to Elijah, from above."

The land, in four tracts in widely scattered areas, is for the development of State parks.

He says his record of 15 bobcats and 1 Canadian lynx, on which the State paid bounties in 1932, is better than all the rest of the trappers in the State combined.

He also has killed hundreds of foxes, opossums, muskrats, skunks, weasels, raccoons, owls and hawks.

U. S. Bars Using Federal Funds On Transients

States Must Care for All Migratory Works, Says Hopkins.

(United Press.)

The Federal Government last night placed full responsibility for care of stranded migratory transient workers upon the States.

Harry L. Hopkins, Federal emergency relief administrator, in a statement said only a limited amount of Govenrment money is available for transients.

"Utmost vigilnace," he said, "must be employed in assuring that these funds be available to the treatment of bona fide transients."

A number of States, he added, have encouraged employment of seasonal migratory worker in industrialized types of agriculture. He named especially Pacific Coast States, Texas, New Jersey, Maryland, New Hampshire, Colorado, Michigan, Virginia and Illinois.

"These workers and their fmailies have followed seasonal demands for their labor and to a considerable extent the practice continues," Hopkins said. "The Federal Emergency Relief Administration has been informed that certain transient workers after their employment have insufficient funds with which to return to their legal residences, and it is requested that Federal funds be employed to return them to their homes."

"Responsibility for the care of these people falls upon their employers and upon those States in which they are stranded," he concluded.

Dr. Rasmussen Tells of Life's 3 "Certainties"

Man Wants to Be Sure of God's Existence, He Says in Sermon.

The three important certainties for which man strives were explained by the Rev. Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen yesterday at Luther Place Memorial Church.

"Man wants to be certain of the existence of God," he said. "If there is no God, there can be nothing but vanity in the world.

"He wants to be certain the self he has spent his life building will not end with death.

"Man also seeks the certainty the universe is on the side of morality—that seeds he sows will yield a harvest.

"There is little certainty in life. Some believe it rational to 'eat, drink and be merry lest tomorrow we die'; but suppose we do not die?

Pellagra Checked, U. S. Reports Show

Year's Death Toll Smallest in Official History.

(Associated Press.)

Pellagra, particularly common in Southern States and traceable almost entirely to faulty diet, was held in check this year, despite the fact that thousands have had a hard time getting any food at all.

Dr. R. C. Williams, of the Public Health Service, said yesterday preliminary reports showed the 1933 death toll the smallest since records have been kept.

"People know more about pellagra now than they once did," Dr. Williams said. "They know proper diet will, in most cases, prevent or cure it. State health departments have been working against the disease and have made great progress."

Since 1929, records show, the pellagra death toll has been cut almost in half.

Bridge Tolls Are Facing Test

Right to Fix Interstate Rates Will Be Argued by Attorneys Oct. 14.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 17 (Spl.).—Argument in the legal test of the West Virginia Public Service Commission's power to regulate tolls and service on interstate bridges has been postponed in Charleston until October 4.

The pending case, now before Supreme Court of Appeals, is on a mandamus procedure to force Harper's Ferry & Potomac Bridge Co. to file its rate schedule with the commission and submit to the commission's regulatory authority. The case was originally scheduled the last week, but was continued by agreement because some of the bridge company attorneys were vacationing.

Interstate bridges in this Eastern Panhandle section have been profitable because they escape State regulation, according to data prepared by John Henry Lewin, people's counsel of the Maryland Public Service Commission.

Virginia Apple Crop to Be Low

Winchester, Va., Sept. 17 (Spl.) The September estimate of the United States Department of Agriculture on the commercial apple crop of the nation, reflects damage by storm and other agencies in the Shenandoah-Potomac - Cumberland apple belt of Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania. The hurricane of August 23 caused crop damage estimated at $3,000,000.

The 1933 crop is estimated at 28,084,000 barrels, more than a half million barrels below the short crop of 28,645,000 barrels of last year.

The 1933 crop is 4½ million barrels, or 15 per cent less than the 5-year average. It is estimated the new crop will be the shortest since the 26,000,000-barrel crop of 1927.

New York's crop is showing up better than on August 1, with a gain from 3,420,000 barrels to 3,800,000 barrels given the state as a whole; but still well under last year's 4,550,000 barrels and the 5-year average of 4,316,000 barrels.

Virginia's crop is cut from the August estimate of 2,265,000 barrels to 2,025,000. West Virginia's commercial crop is estimated now at 800,000 barrels, against 840,000 in August and against a 5-year average of 1,340,000 barrels.

Pennsylvania took a heavy cut to 754,000 barrels from the August estimate of 1,021,000.

Suburban Highway Program.

Maryland's revised public highway program is now under consideration by the State advisory committee on public works, preliminary to submission to the Federal Public Works Administration and the Bureau of Public roads. The State roads commission has drawn up a list of 32 projects whose total cost is estimated at $12,367,414. The commission reports that State and Federal funds can be made available to the extent of $11,162,279, which would justify adoption of the program as recommended.

Some of the Maryland projects are virtually additions to the highway system of the District of Columbia, and others are extensions of that system, connecting with Pennsylvania and Virginia. It is proposed to construct a new highway to connect Washington and Annapolis, thereby relieving the overcrowded Defense highway. The new road would run from Camp Parole and Davidsonville and join the District highway system at Central avenue.

Plans for improving Wisconsin, Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire avenues, and for building a suburban highway connecting Piney Branch underpass, Takoma Park and Hyattsville, are included in the Maryland program. These improvements would promote the growth of Washington and afford relief for communities where the roads are inadequate.

The improvement of streets in Baltimore, connecting Washington with Philadelphia, is also proposed, besides the widening of the Belair and Philadelphia roads north of Baltimore. Widening of the Baltimore-Annapolis road and the Leonardtown-St. Marys highway would be beneficial to traffic originating in Washington.

The State of Maryland has been most progressive in highway improvement and is reaping the benefits in enlarged activity and increasing population. Montgomery, Prince Georges and Anne Arundel Counties are virtually parts of the National Capital area, which might well be borne in mind by the Federal authorities in considering the Maryland highway program.

Jobs Regained.

No evidence of improved conditions is more encouraging than gains in employment. For about 40,000,000 Americans a job is almost equivalent to good times.

Secretary Perkins reports that about 2,200,000 men and women have been put to work since March. About 750,000 workers regained employment during the month ended August 15. Men on pay rolls immediately become consumers. Most of the newly employed are eager to earn and to spend. Just as the reduction of employment in the first stages of a depression accentuates its severity, the return of men to their jobs accelerates recovery.

Factory employment gained 6.4 per cent in August and pay rolls advanced 11.6 per cent. This may be somewhat less than was expected by some enthusiasts, but it is a substantial improvement for a season that is normally marked by business recession. Secretary Perkins carefully notes that this is only the beginning of the "upward spiral we are working for," and calls attention to the fact that employment is still 28.4 per cent below the 1926 average, and pay rolls 48 per cent below.

Hard Times and Long Life.

It may be small consolation to a man without a job to learn that the life span of workingmen has steadily increased during the depression. Some one has suggested that a merrier span of life, even if shorter, would be preferable in these days of struggle and hardship.

A life insurance company finds that the average length of life among its millions of industrial policy holders has increased 12 years since 1911. In other words, a whole year has been added to the life span of a typical group of industrial workers every 21 months. The gain has been especially notable in recent years.

The expectation of life among this class of industrial workers in 1911 was 46.62 years. By 1927 it had increased to 56.42 years. During the last three calendar years the life expectation for this same group has been as follows: 1930, 57.36 years; 1931, 57.90 years, and in 1932, 58.80 years.

It is contended by some authorities that the depression helped to lengthen the life span by slowing down the pace of American economic activity. Industrial accidents have been fewer. Some people have had more time to give attention to their health. On the other hand, cases of malnutrition must be numerous, and the mental strain of depression no doubt has taken its toll.

Some effects of these hard times may appear in the vital statistics hereafter. Yet, if the statistics compiled by the insurance company are correct, the expectation of life has been notably extended among that group of people which is most affected by unemployment and material want. At least, it is gratifying to note that some of the benefits which science is making available to the human race have not been suspended during this critical period.

A Uniform Gasoline Tax.

Senator Harry F. Byrd has devised a plan to overcome some of the difficulties arising from taxation of gasoline by many political units. He would abolish the State levies and have Congress impose a tax of 5 cents per gallon on gasoline throughout the country. The proceeds would then be apportioned among the States on the basis of automobile registration.

At present gasoline is taxed by both the Federal and State governments, and in some instances by counties and municipalities as well. The result is heavy taxes on motor fuel in some parts of the country, while only moderate levies prevail in others. In cases where there is a considerable difference in the tax of neighboring States bootlegging becomes a problem. It is difficult for legitimate filling stations to operate near the border line of a State with a low gasoline tax.

It is questionable, however, whether the difficulties involved in the multiplicity of gasoline tax levies would justify the surrender to Congress of full control over this source of revenue. For the most part funds from gasoline taxes are used for highway construction and maintenance, which is primarily a State function. Some States find it necessary to impose high charges upon the sale of motor fuel in order to develop their road systems. Other States are able to finance adequate highway programs with moderate gasoline taxes. The imposition of a uniform tax might give some States more revenue from this source than they need, and might force others to seek new forms of taxation.

Under Senator Byrd's plan it would be impossible for one State to secure a reduction or an increase of its gasoline tax until a majority in Congress could be converted to the idea. Gasoline taxes would no longer be regulated to the needs of the various States. Power over one of the most important sources of State revenue would be lodged in Washington.

Another aspect of the proposal deserves consideration. If Congress should levy the tax, State officials would be relieved of the responsibility arising therefrom. Complaints of excessive taxation of motor fuel would have to be directed to Washington. Yet State officials would spend the revenue from such taxes. Economy on their part would not necessarily result in lower tax rates, because the demands of other States would have to be considered in Washington. Hence, the incentive to economy would be diminished. One group of officials would levy the tax and another group would spend it; and division of responsibility usually results in inefficiency and waste.

The Spectroscope.

Additions to knowledge of the distant stars and the application of this knowledge to industry recall that Sir Isaac Newton's curiosity, which was responsible for influencing modern thought in so many ways, provided science with the spectroscope. It was he who toyed with a ray of sunlight and succeeded in breaking it up into component colors by passing it through a wedge-shaped glass prism. Rainbow hues had shimmered through chandelier prisms before, but no one had thought any more of the colored patterns than of apples falling from a tree.

Experiments with the first spectroscope consisted of sending light through a tube having a wedge of glass or quartz in the center for breaking up the light. It was soon discovered that the pattern, or spectrum, of candlelight differed from sunlight; the spectrum of molten copper differed from molten lead; and finally it was found that every element had an individual pattern. Photographing the spectra gave permanent records and showed more colors than could be seen with the eye.

The use of the spectroscope with the telescope has made it possible for astronomers to know what elements exist in distant stars. Spectroscopic analysis of the light rays has identified nickel, helium, sodium, and a host of other materials in the heavenly bodies. Chemists have extracted hundreds of new substances by analyzing the products of their experiments at various stages with the spectroscope.

In industry the value of the spectroscope has in recent years become inestimable. Light from molten ore in the process of smelting is constantly watched until foreign materials are burned out, thus saving tons of metal by shutting off the heat at the exact moment when purity is reached. The rubber industry has used the spectroscope to identify impurities in raw materials which would tend to harden or crack the finished product. Some manufacturing concerns examine metal they are to use before it is removed from freight cars, avoiding unnecessary handling of unfit material.

Transition in Austria.

Austria, like a number of other European countries, is in a state of transition. Only a few years ago that country was negotiating a customs union with Germany, and even today its text books are replete with reference to political "anschluss" with the Reich. For the moment, however, much of the Vienna government's energy is devoted to strengthening resistance to Germany's influence.

The conflict between Berlin and Vienna doubtless will have an effect upon the Austrian state for many years. Chancellor Dollfuss is building a new type of government that seems specifically designed to preserve Austria from the influence of the Nazis. The old parliament with the old leaders, he says, are gone forever. He has instructed some of his trusted associates to prepare a new constitution which will give Austria "an authoritarian government on a corporative basis." This does not mean that Chancellor Dollfuss has turned to Fascism, but that he is trying to devise a new type of strong central government that will suit Austria's peculiar needs.

It will be interesting to watch the progress of Austria's political transformation. Chancellor Dollfuss' remarks lead to the belief that he may not have a very clear idea of what the outcome will be. But Austria finds herself surrounded by dictatorships. Her leaders feel the need of developing a government that can more effectively cope with the present disturbed situation. Yet Austria is not in full sympathy with Fascism, and manifests intense hostility for the type of regime that Adolf Hitler has established in Germany. Hence, Austria is about to make a contribution of her own to the world's many experiments in dictatorial government.

Reducing Army Posts.

Concentration of the United States land forces in larger units in fewer and better camps is to be consummated under executive order. It is announced that the President's plan calls for the abandonment of about 50 of the present Army posts. In connection with the redistribution plans an allotment of $50,000,000 has been made for necessary expansions and improvements.

The projected consolidation is a measure that has been advocated for years by the Army and War Department as a desirable step, making for efficiency and economy. Two years ago the then Secretary of War, Patrick J. Hurley, recommended the abolition of 53 Army posts, but such vigorous opposition was raised in Congress and from the local points affected that no more than five posts were abolished.

Under the present program of consolidation the specific stations which are to be abandoned have not been made public, and will not be until completed plans are ready for execution. It is inevitable that objections will be raised when the list is made known. The smaller communities, particularly, which depend largely upon Army business, may be expected to protest against the abolition of their posts.

Of the 210 Army stations in the United States, some 60 are carried by the War Department in an inactive status, with only a skeleton complement of caretakers. If 50 of the troop concentration posts are now abandoned it will leave approximately 100 to be included in the plans for improvement. It is believed that some of these stations may be made much larger than others, to permit greater concentration and thereby facilitate training and large-scale maneuvers.

Smorgasbord and Snaps.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Smorgasbord, snaps and skal. These are the three most important words in the Swedish language. As proof of their indissoluble relationship they all begin with the same letter. They stand for an impressive ritual of hospitality and good-fellowship. They have contributed more to the fame and glory of Sweden than Gustavus Adolphus himself. They explain why Stockholm is challenging the supremacy of Geneva as a conference city. What could be more thrilling than skaling solemnly with your snaps over a smorgasbord served in the Town Hall of Stockholm, the capital of Smorgasland? That is what every international conference worth its salt is able to offer to its delegates.

The smorgasbord is a symbol of national unity. Rich and poor, young and old, all partake of it. The Communist can not look upon it without emotion, and the Nazi does not stop to ask whether it is a Marxist concoction. To the exiled Swede smorgasbord and snaps carry the same message from home as does mammy to the crooning Aframerican.

The smorgasbord at its best may properly be compared to the introduction of a Shaw play; it is usually more elaborate, more interesting, and better served than what comes after. The word itself can not be translated; it is the name given to a vast multitude of dishes, hot and cold, ranging from anchovies and smoked salmon to Stilton and Gorgonzola, all of which the Swede, for the benefit of the ignorant foreigner, modestly describes as hors 'doeuvres. But while the Frenchman merely toys with a sardine, and will nibble at a radish only under the greatest provocation, the Swede, as an honest trencherman and a good Nordic, rolls up his sleeves and sets to heartily.

He takes breath only to gulp down the statutory number of centiliters of snaps, measured out by an incorruptible waiter acting on behalf of a paternal government. And when smorgasbord has been completely wrecked he comes reluctantly to the surface and admits he is beginning to feel hungry. He is glad to know that dinner will soon be served. Herring and shrimps and tongue and trout and cucumber and chicken and roast beef and foie-gras and smoked eel and omelettes and ham and a hundred other dishes have a stimulating effect on his appetite.

Yet the smorgasbord and its allies have one disadvantage. It is all very well for the Swede to say that his countrymen are the tallest in Europe. As the truest specimens of the Nordic race that is only what we should expect of them. But if they owe their height to the Nordic race, it is to smorgasbord that they owe their weight. It is a sobering thought which the visitor to Sweden had better bear in mind before succumbing heart and soul to a native custom.

The Once Over.

PLEA OF A BUSINESS MAN NRA PARADE VETERAN.

I'll do what you ask in my business—
Just give me the dope on your wishes—
I'll quickly and gladly play ball.
I'll sign anything that you ask me
And help you make all of those grades;
I'm yours in the major offensive—
BUT, MISTER, I'M THROUGH WITH PARADES!

II.

I'll do what you wish about eagles,
I'll spend to the limit, and buy;
I'll make any pledges you call for
And not ask the wherefore or why.
I'll join with a cheer in whatever
New projects the NRA likes;
There's only one thing that I'm asking—
LAY OFF ALL THOSE FOURTEEN-MILE HIKES!

III.

You'll find me a most loyal rooter
For all the recovery plans;
In all that the President stands for
You'll find me the hottest of fans.
I'll do anything at your bidding—
I'll plow under wheat, rye or hogs—
I'll even sign up to lose money
BUT, MISTER, BE KIND TO MY DOGS!

IV.

I've faith in your plans, I love 'em—
I'll help you go over the top;
I'll sign any code without balking
And do what you wish in my shop.
I'll cheer all your plans to the echo,
Whatever you order I'll take,
But, boy, if I'm gonna recover,
MY FEET MUST BE GIVEN A BREAK!

V.

Whatever you want of me, ask it—
I'm yours to the finish, I swear;
I'll do what you want with my bankroll,
My profits the workers can share!
I'll smile at each edict restrictive
And give you the best that I can;
There's only one plea that I'm making—
REMEMBER MY ARCHES, OLD MAN!

Just Folks.

By Edgar A. Guest.

An Old Fool.

At seventy-five, his wife long dead,
He met a woman young and fair
And he believed her when she said:
"I like a man with silver hair."

Her voice was soft, her laughter gay.
She had a certain touch of grace
And he was pleased to hear her say:
"I like a man with wrinkled face."

For her his purse was opened wide.
He bought her gifts of every kind,
And he believed her when she cried:
"I like a man who's almost blind."

He had to walk with careful tread,
But followed as she lured him on
And he believed her when she said:
"I like a man whose strength is gone."

One glance within his looking-glass
You'd think had brought him reason cool,
But he believed the flattering lass

A Fable Concerning a Second Husband and a Set of Whiskers

By Robert Quillen

BILL SMITH'S wife neglected him. To hear Bill tell it, she was about the poorest excuse for a wife any man ever had.

It wasn't merely a matter of failing to sew on buttons and fetch his slippers and lay out his clothes. And it wasn't the mere habit of attending bridge parties and leaving Bill to eat sardines and crackers.

Bill felt cheated and abused, but he wasn't meek enough to endure it in silence. He told his wife what he thought of her. In fact, he talked of little else except her unfairness and general worthlessness.

She didn't seem to care what he said. And when he quit taking her places and quit buying her birthday presents in order to remind her that such things must be deserved, she merely shut her lips tighter and said nothing.

Bill thought of divorcing her, but he knew she wouldn't care. And he wished to hurt her—to punish her for being so ornery.

"So you wish to make her suffer for her sins," said the wise one. "It is very simple. First you fake a suicide and disappear. Then you grow a beard to disguise yourself and come back with an assumed name. You court her until she is mad about you, and then you marry her and play the ideal husband. When she has learned to love you so much that she can't live without you, you simply disappear again. That will break her heart and you will have your revenge."

The scheme worked nicely and within a year Bill was his wife's second husband. And what a husband! Never before had a wife been so petted, so courted, so waited upon and entertained and flattered.

Bill laughed in his sleeve as he watched the effect of his strategy. His wife was desperately, foolishly in love with him. He had her at his mercy. When the blow fell it would almost kill her.

A year later Bill saw the wise man on the street and tried to dodge him.

"Wait a moment, son," said the wise one. "Tell me how it worked. Did she die of a broken heart when you quit her?"

"No," said Bill, "she didn't." Then he grinned sheepishly and added: "She turned out to be such a perfect wife that I couldn't do without her."

Letters to the Editor

Public and Bureau of Engraving Workers Discommoded by Bad Traffic Conditions.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir:

I write this complaint to the Washington Post because it is read in its entirety by more people than any other publication in Washington and I know it will reach the eyes of those who are responsible. It is an undeniable fact that jobs are scarce and a man or woman who is employed at this time is indeed "sitting pretty." But you know that in order to hold on to what you have you must be punctual, and if you are late morning after morning, you can't pass the buck to any means of transportation. Your up-to-date paper has many readers in Alexandria who are employed in Washington, not forgetting the hundreds from the surrounding counties. They have to report at a certain hour each morning and they shouldn't be required to start the night before in order to be on the job. The up-to-date bus lines we have, we believe, are the best ever operated in our midst. Nothing is left undone to get our people in on time. But "Paul may plant and Apollos may water," but some one else has a part to play to help in this matter.

We all know that Fourteenth street, from Constitution avenue to the steam railroad, is a beehive of travel. It is the outlet of Washington to all vehicles going South.

The director of traffic should pay some attention to what transpires on this street, especially when he knows that thousands of men and women are employed in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and must use this thoroughfare and must be on time. In the first place the cars run up to the bureau much too early to take care of the employes of the bureau when they emerge. In the second place they have been installing a large pipe in the new Commerce Building and it has taken a week to do what ordinarily could be done in 24 hours. With the cars parked in front of this structure and dirt about 6 feet high it is impossible for other traffic to pass, and a congestion—every day—has been the rule rather than the exception.

Washington well deserves the name of the City Beautiful, but how many more good things could be said about it if we did not have the promiscuous parking on the streets which obscure everything of interest to the visitor? New York, Chicago and Baltimore have dispensed with all parking on their main thoroughfares and Washington could, with credit, to this great Nation, do the same thing. Then all who came here would be able to view the beauty of our magnificent buildings without getting out of their cars.

As a commuter, I write from actual experience.

W. C. T. U. Will Continue to Fight Liquor Traffic, Says President Boole.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

We appeal directly to newspapers to publish our views on what we believe is an unfair, unethical and an unstatesmanlike use of the depressed economic condition to put over the repeal of prohibition. Postmaster General Farley, acting simultaneously as chairman of the Democratic national committee and also representing the administration, has stated that repeal of the eighteenth amendment is an important part of the national recovery act. He made this statement Saturday, August 26, and hundreds of thousands of drys in this country, including the members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, take exception.

The W. C. T. U. will continue its educational program against the use of alcohol in the home, at social functions, in public and in private. We will not yield the point that if the eighteenth amendment is repealed it will help the country financially. Whatever the Nation may do, the W. C. T. U. refuses to retreat before the liquor traffic.

Every American a Mayflower Descendant, if He Cares to Figure It Out.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

One of your corespondents, on the basis of three generations to a century and an assumption of families of certain sizes, reaches the conclusion that with the sixth generation there would be 72,500 Mayflower descendants, although intermarriage might reduce this total somewhat. The sixth generation would have been living in the early years of the nineteenth century. If immigration remains stationary, it may be possible a century hence to include nearly all Americans in the General Society of the Descendants of the Founding Fathers, assuming that they would care for membership in an organization to which everybody was eligible.

WHATEVER became of Mr. Henry I. Harriman and Mr. Rand, the typewriter man and his—er-er—his Council of the Nation, that's it, Council of the Nation. Oh, of course, I know Mr. Harriman is still here as president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and Mr. Rand maybe is stuck around here somewhere in the New Deal. But the point is that one never hears from them any more and yet they had a lot to do with starting the NRA. Now, it is as if they started the fire and then, becoming frightened at the spread, ran away.

Bargeron.

Certain it is they never visualized it developing the way it did. They would have been the last ones in the world to suggest it if they had. Their part in the conception of the thing is, in fact, one of the biggest jokes we have had on big business in a long time.

• • • •

MESSRS. Harriman and Rand were what you might call the belated answer to a Nation's prayer for business leaders, for some one of the business fraternity that had been prating for so long about how American business ingenuity beat the whole world, to come forward and for heaven's sake do something.

You will recall that quite a cry went up in this regard after the depression had lasted about a year. The people began to get sore and impatient toward the fraternity as a whole because no one of them seemed to know anything to do. And a wave of cynical and even brutal jibes was directed at the whole lot.

• • • •

THE supineness of the crowd carried on, too, right into the good year 1933 A. D., by which time both the banker and the business man were pretty low in the gutter insofar as popular opinion was concerned.

Well, I imagine it angered some of them, made them frantic to do something to get their crowd out of the ill repute. Anyway, Messrs. Harriman and Rand finally appeared, determined to give the leadership which would restore their fellows to standing in the public mind. About Mr. Harriman there was nothing ostentatious and no outward, or rather, no aggressive bid for publicity. He felt the need for leadership and decided quietly, or comparatively so, that he would give it.

• • • •

THIS can not be said for Mr. Rand, though. He bounced in here all over the front pages and remained there for a considerable time, until he disappeared, in fact. There was a time in the early days of Mr. Roosevelt's administration when one wondered just who it was that was going to give us prosperity, the President or Mr. Rand.

Now, as to the origin of the NRA, I doubt that Mr. Rand had much to do with it. Mr. Harriman had plenty. The first seed was sown, of course, with the passage by the Senate of Senator Black's bill for a 36-hour week over all the United States.

While Mr. Roosevelt had it held up in the House until he could get his bearings on the thing, Mr. Harriman had a beautiful idea. Why not, he asked himself, give these shorter working hours if business in turn would be relieved from the antitrust laws. And he sold the idea to the administration. That was all there was to it in the beginning.

• • • •

MR. RAND was quick to embrace the plan. Indeed, he took the front pages immediately with the promise that business was just waiting for the passage of the bill to put 3,000,000 men to work. Why, under the circumstances, Congress could hardly take time to read the bill.

It would be interesting to know what the gentlemen think of their handiwork today.

It is my impression that Mr. Harriman is still wedded to the idea in the main, but that the development of it has given him some anxious moments. Certainly Mr. Harriman and the business influences that followed him never anticipated that they were setting up a plan that was not to be simply a swap of shorter working hours for elimination of the antitrust laws, but a movement for the unionization of all industry and a redistributon of wealth. They could not have conceived this. They would be run out of the big business world if they had.

Gen. Johnson is right when he says impatiently of the criticism being directed at him now, that business men were running to the Government with hat in hand, beseeching it to do something. The trouble is they didn't know this is what the Government would do.

Farmers Holding Back.

Minneapolis Journal.

No one knows what effect the great hog slaughter will have. Marketing of brood sows has been disappointing. Underweight pigs, expected to come in at a rate of five pigs to every sow, have been coming 25 to 1 instead. In many cases, farmers have held back their reproducing units with thought of more pigs to sell when the price is higher. This is violation, by the farmers themselves, of the principle and spirit of the costly Government plan set up for their benefit. It may defeat the plan.

Courage Chief Need of Press, Dean Reports

Ackerman Issues Call for Fearless Comment as Well as News.

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—Dean Carl W. Ackerman, of the Columbia School of Journalism, said today in his annual report it was indispensible to public welfare that the press be free to record, interpret, or comment on facts, as well as print what is inspired or requested by "earnest and devoted public officials. He said:

"At no time in the history of the United States has education of the public in national and international affairs been so essential as during the recent period of depression and the present cycle of reconstruction."

"As the press is the chief impartial and uncontrolled agency for the distribution of information its responsibilities are evident."

The public, said the dean, continued to buy and read newspapers during the depression "although deprived of many necessities." He added:

"With the Roosevelt administration in a position to control radio; with an almost equal power over motion pictures, and with public emotion stimulated to such a tense state that public meetings must of necessity reflect the spirit as well as the letter of inspired Government propaganda, the only possibility of the United States escaping a dictatorship was inherent in the fight for public recognition of freedom of the press.

"If the newspapers of the world were free to report and interpret affairs in their respective countries, there would be less cause for concern over recent developments in the United States. But the history of Russia, Italy, Germany and Japan establish the fact that once the press is controlled, all institutions which function in the fields of liberty lose their rights and their heritage and individual liberty of thought and action disappears entirely.

Editorial courage is needed; knowledge and understanding. Responsibiltiy for the public effect of the printed word is imperative. But above all, courage!

Reds Written In Peace Pact

Duce Says Italo-Russian Treaty Aligns Soviet With 4 Powers.

Rome, Sept. 17 (AP).—Conclusion of the new Italo-Russian nonaggression pact is regarded in official fascist circles as definitely bringing the Soviets into cooperation on the four-power plan for European peace and reconstruction.

The official Fascist view is that the new accord constitutes an adjunct of the treaty by which Germany, England, France and Italy pledged themselves to preserve tranquillity on the continent for at least a decade.

Officially inspired editorials declare it is "cast in the spirit of the four-power pact and completes its sphere of action."

Specifically, Russia and Italy agree, in addition to preserving a policy of nonaggression, to attempt no economic boycotts against each other and to refer to conciliation proceedings and conflict between them that can not be settled through diplomatic channels. In case of a conflict of either with a third nation the other is to remain neutral.

Since the Soviets are now on good relations with Frnace and England, only their troubles with the Nazi regime in Germany remain in the way of direct cooperation with all the signatories of the four-power pact.

Italy hopes to play an effective role of intermediary in cases where the Soviets and Nazis have diverging viewpoints.

Japan Extends Claims in China

Planes Drop Pleas on City of Shanhaikwan for Manchukuo Merger.

Shanhaikwan, China, Sept. 17 (AP).—A delegation sent to petition Gov. Pu-Yi of Manchukuo for incorporation of Shanhaikwan into that state, returned today to find the population celebrating the move under Japanese direction.

Japanese airplanes were flying over the area, dropping propaganda which urged that the entire region be taken into Manchukuo.

Tientsin, China, Sept. 17 (AP).—Gov. Yu Hsueh Chung of Hopei Province, charged that Japanese military forces in Manchuria are putting on the Chinese population of the Shanhaikwan area to ask its annexation by Manchuria.

Gov. Yu said the Japanese control of the city enables them "to force celebrations which have been going on there in the past two days with the object of presenting the appearance that the Chinese desire annexation."

Peiping, Sept. 17 (AP).—Despite Japanese allegations that the Chinese have occupied Kuyuan, near the Jehol border, indications tonight showed no impending clash between Japanese and Chinese in southeastern Chahar.

Aguinaldo Heads Plea for Complete Freedom.

Manila, Philippine Islands, Sept. 18 (Monday) (AP).—The Philippine Veterans Association, composed of insurrectionists who fought for independence 30 years ago, today adopted a resolution urging rejection of the Hawes-Cutting independence act.

Emilio Aguinaldo, insurrector general, as president of the association advocated adoption of the resolution, which said:

"Our people desire their complete independence."

It added that destruction of the Philippine economic system was probable under the act.

Paris Presses Deflation Plan

Premier Hopes Thereby to Protect Franc as Dollar Drops.

Paris, Sept. 17 (AP).—Premier Daladier was said today to be developing a plan of monetary deflation to salvage the budget and protect the franc.

Increased danger was seen in the continued decline of the United States dollar and in renewed talk of American inflation. Industrial interests of France meanwhile warned that inflation would cause France to impose a 15 per cent import surtax.

It was said a deflation plan, a reverse of the American policy of higher prices, was intended as a countermove to avert inflation in France.

Its objects include lowering living costs, and lifting the purchasing power of the franc at home to its level abroad, resulting in depreciation of the dollar.

Negotiations between Premier Daladier, Minister of Finance Georges Bonnet, and Minister of the Budget Lucien Lamoureaux are being kept private until either results are achieved or the plan is dropped.

Poor Polly!

Parrot Comes Into Own in Talkfest Today at Exposition.

Chicago, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—The Century of Progress Exposition has offered almost every kind of an exhibition, so tomorrow it will sponsor a contest to find the champion talking parrot.

The contest will determine which parrot can say the most words in five minutes. If at the end of that time any bird is still talking, the limit will be extended.

More than 25 parrots have been entered. It is said some belong to sailors. None of the judges will be women, however, and any kind of word will be counted.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—A play called "El Infierno de Gore," or, in literal translation, "Gore Is Hell," will be produced here shortly, in criticism of Governor General Robert Gore, the producers announced tonight.

The play is by local playwrights. A noted Spanish comedian will play the role of "Gorito," as the governor is known here.

Gov. Gore, returning tomorrow, will have an opportunity to hear "himself" in Spanish—unless the performance is banned.

French Cotton Deal Embraces 3 Million Bales

B. Coles Neidecker Coming Here to Negotiate Big Purchase.

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—B. Coles Neidecker, American international banker with headquarters in Paris, will arrive Wednesday to negotiate purchase by French interests of 3,000,000 bales of cotton.

He will go directly to Washington to complete negotiations.

The credit arrangements are based on the wheat formula used by Neidecker when he represented a grain cartel in purchasing 50,000,000 bushels of wheat from the Federal Farm Board two years ago.

The basic features were intergovernmental credits and an exchange of foreign commodities for American wheat.

Neidecker has been identified with intergovernmental commodity negotiations. After serving in the American aviation force during the war, he became a member of the United States Relief Commission to Poland. He founded the Travelers Bank of Paris, in 1921, and Neidecker & Co. in 1926. Neidecker plans to study workings of the NRA while here.

Pact Weighed For Inspection Of All Armies

America Expected to Join Britain and France in Advocating Move.

Paris, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Agreement on an international arms commission to inspect the armed forces of the world twice a year for three years was expected to be reached this week by France, Great Britain and the United States in preliminary armament discussions opening tomorrow.

Formation of such a commission to act on behalf of the League of Nations probably will be recommended by these powers when the preliminary World Arms Conference reconvenes next month at Geneva.

The plan would hold up all other disarmament moves during the three-year period, it was believed, to permit its trial. If it regulates armament, further reductions may be unnecessary, it was said.

Navy Building Halt Urged.

London, (Monday), Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The political editor of the Daily Mail today said the British Government has suggested to Washington, through Norman Davis, roving American envoy in Europe, postponement of America's naval building program as an aid to forthcoming disarmament discussions.

So far there has been no reply from Washington, the paper added.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 17 (AP).—Mayor Ray T. Miller announced tonight he had been advised by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator, that the protested NRA compliance board appointed for Cleveland could not function until Johnson had approved it.

O'Brien Orders Economy Study

Action Comes Just Before New York Election.

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—Almost on the eve of the city primary election, Mayor John P. O'Brien today appointed three department heads to survey the Municipal Government for economy possibilities.

Police Commissioner Bolan, Fire Commissioner Dorman, and Superintendent of Buildings Fassler, will work under the direction of Samuel Untermyer, who has demanded salary reductions as part of an economy program.

Mayor O'Brien is seeking renomination Tuesday on the Democratic ticket, with two independents opposing him. Tammany Hall leaders predicted tonight the voters would endorse the Mayor's administration with a large vote.

South Sea Water May Produce Ice

French Scientist Heads Unusual Project.

Paris, Sept. 17 (AP).—A project to make tropical seas produce cheap ice is under study by the French Academy of Sciencs.

Its author is Georges Claude, who sought several years ago to harness force caused by contact of warm and cold currents on the theory that it could be transmitted to shore for distribution.

He now proposes to fit up a 10,000-ton ship as a seagoing ice plant, utilizing the same principles. The ship will be ready in 10 months, he said.

He estimated cost of this ice at one-fifth the present price and envisaged the possibility of using it to make living more comfortable in warm coastal cities.

Chicago Schools Open Today; Payless Pay Days in Prospect

1,300 Teachers Dropped, Courses Cut Out and Term Shortened.

Chicago, Sept. 17 (AP).—A half million Chicago children tomorrow will start to school under an educational system stripped of all its "frills" for economy's sake.

They will be welcomed in the classrooms by 13,000 teachers who have not yet received all their salaries for last year's services. Such is the situation as the city schools prepare to open two weeks later than usual amid the disorders of reorganization under a budget designed to save taxpayers $5,000,000 in a year.

Many Courses Dropped.

Crane Junior College, abolished.

Physical education, athletic programs and sports activities pared to fit a 50 per cent budget slash.

Vocational printing, household arts, manual training, wood working, kindergarten, band and orchestra training abolished. In addition, junior high schools in most instances have been eliminated and three-year high schools combined. Other courses will be dropped.

Despite all this curtailment, Chicago's giant educational system will cost the city $41,000,000 this year, almost one-fifth of the entire tax bill.

1,300 Teachers Dropped.

Thirteen hundred teachers will not return to work. They have been given a "leave of absence." Payless pay days are in prospect for those 13,000 who still have their jobs.

Chicago's school situation has been made acute for the last three years by tax delinquencies.

When It Comes to Charm The Eyes Should Have It

Eyes should be the most beautiful feature in a woman's face and if nature did not make them so, women may find encouragement in the fact that the foundation of all beauty is effort.

Because eyes are the most expressive feature in the face, wrinkles are apt to come early to their corners and fatigue and strain quickly registers around them. To enhance and preserve their beauty, special exercises and use of special preparations to be found on the market, are necessary.

Gentle Massages a Help.

The merest film of nourishing cream, worked into the skin surrounding the eyes, with a gentle, rotary stroking motion, will rest and strengthen the eye muscles. This should be done daily. Always, just before retiring, generously anoint the skin around the eyes with a rich nourishing cream and allow it to remain on overnight. In the morning remove any remaining cream with soft tissue.

Bathe the eyes with reliable eye lotion every morning. Not only does this remove any trace of irritation from cream which may have penetrated to the eye ball, but it strengthens the eyes and adds to their luster.

Care After Exposure

Always, after close work or exposure to bright sunlight, or after motoring, yachting or flying, use an antiseptic eyedrop in the eyes. This makes for eye health, preserves the youthful blue-whiteness of the eyeballs and enhances their natural brilliance.

To promote the growth of long, shadowy eyelashes and good eyebrows, use a recommended ointment nightly. Just a fleck of some good oil or ointment, used regularly on brows and lashes, will improve the most obstinate case of thin lashes, even on the lower lid. And the woman who does not care for eye makeup—who shrinks from the use of mascara, eyeshadow and pencil—will find this treatment gives a dewy, natural freshness to the eyes.

Display at Chicago's Fair Brings Perfume Here at Moderate Prices.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

In this day and time when so much attention and study is given to the cultivation of personality, it is highly essential for a woman to give careful thought to each item of her toilet. It is not only her conversational ability that lends her charm, but her clothes, her coiffure, her makeup and her perfume which establish her individuality.

It has been interesting to note how many Washington women who visited the Century of Progress exposition have remarked on the striking display of a well-known perfume company. According to a large department store, there have been numerous inquiries regarding a certain new scent which was featured. It comes in attractive modernistic bottles, in three sizes, $1.10, $2.20 and $4.40. Now on sale in Washington.

Mother used to bring us large tin horns when she'd return from her shopping tour and find we'd been good children. And weren't we thrilled! They would thoroughly establish us as leaders of the neighborhood gang, until somebody else was a good child, too, and got one a little larger and a little louder.

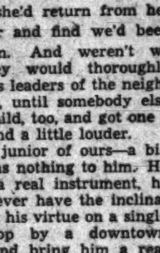
As for this junior of ours—a big tin horn means nothing to him. He has to have a real instrument, he does. If you ever have the inclination to reward his virtue on a single afternoon, stop by a downtown music store and bring him a real little flute. There are several sizes, priced from 15 cents to 25 cents.

You might be surprised to learn that as many shoes have gone to rack and ruin from lying on dusty closet floors than from hard wear and tear on the streets. You take precautions to hang up your clothes; don't you owe your shoes the same consideration? The days of the plain old-fashioned shoe tree are gone forever and the new hanger-trees are fast supplanting them. This new arrangement fits into your shoes and automatically straightens them into shape. The arch part of it rises out of the shoe and provides a means of hanging.

A special hood to hold one pair is provided with each set of these hanger-trees. They come in two sizes for women's shoes, 25 cents for either, and one size for men's shoes, 35 cents.

On the way home she remarked to her husband: "That was the best beer I ever tasted!"

For a moment he was inarticulate. "The best beer! What do you mean? It's the kind we have all the time!"



She was somewhat taken back. "Well, anyway," she answered womanlike, "it tasted better than ours!"

Her husband laughed. "It wasn't the beer, my dear," he told her. "It was those glasses. That's what you liked."

She thought back over the evening and remembered she had noticed how attractively the beer was served. But it took her husband's analytical mind to see what a real effect the garnishings had made.

You can find the same kind of glasses in a Connecticut avenue gift shop. They're very tall and roomy, with heavy glass bottoms. On each one is a hand-painted beer garden scene.

What will it be next? This time a lamp and electric clock combination. Manufacturers of novelty household furnishings are doing their utmost to see how many two-in-one pieces they can design. This one will certainly be a handy little item to have around. Place on your bed table and use the lamp for reading purposes. When you wake up in the night and wonder what time it is, all you have to do is lean over and turn on the switch. Imagine getting all this service for $3.50.

A Twelfth street store is showing a new blouse in a new color that will go beautifully with either black or brown. Ask to see the wax-colored crepe blouse with the new raglan shoulders, tucked in sunburst fashion. The neck is gathered in with brown velvet ribbon, which you can change to black or any other color to match your costume. Tiny tucks around the cuffs carry out the shoulder scheme. The blouse is patterned after a Patou model.

Lumbermen should take heart, for with wooden jewelry coming into fashion business must be looking up for them. And if you doubt that it is the stylish thing to wear, see some of the nobby choker beads in a G street store. Try them on and you'll see that their effect is altogether chic. They come in a natural color, trimmed in either blue or green, for $1.00. Button ear rings to match are only 50 cents.

You needn't be buying a trousseau or planning a hope chest to want some of the French crepe panties and chemise on sale in an F street store. You never saw more daintily trimmed nor beautifully fitting undergarments for $1.95.

Details of Many New Dresses Dramatic as Latest Thriller

Directed by Amos Parrish

All the present day drama isn't confined to the stage or the latest best seller. You don't have to look any farther than your nearest dress shop to find plenty of it. Most any new dress you pick up will have some dramatic accent.

Use Bright Color.

An oriental gold scarf on a bronze green dress would do it. So would a coral collar and cuff set on black. Or a brilliant red clip and matching belt buckle on a dark brown. And there are dozens of other ways.

Your drama doesn't have to be a matter of color, however.

Big Cuffs.

A pair of enormous flared cuffs on a perfectly plain dress would be dramatic and smart, whether they were white on blue or blue on blue.

And certainly you'll agree that many of the new shoulder widening-and-heightening details are full of drama . . . those things which make you look again and say, "Did you see that!"

Contrasting fabrics often turn the trick. We've seen sailcloth collar and cuffs used on a wool dress. Bengaline ones, too. And velvet scarfs and cuffs on silks or wools. They all looked dramatic and exciting.

Scarfs Add Dash.

A scarf which matches the hat can put drama into the costume. And it might match in fabric as well as color. For instance . . . with a dull crepe dress you could wear a satin or velvet beret with a scarf of the same material. And that would be dramatic even if the dress, hat and scarf were black.

New Glove Tricks.

Speaking of gloves, do you know all the tricks they can play for you this fall? Especially those new colored ones.

If you don't you'll surely want our leaflet that explains them and samples the colors for you. So if you'll send us the filled-in coupon with requested inclosures, we'll see that you get the leaflet.

The Family Marketer

The squash, despite the plebian sound of its name, is one of the aristocrats of the vegetable kingdom. Many, many years ago, its ancestors migrated from Persia to England, from whence it was introduced into this country. Here it has lent itself to cultivation in many wises.

There are three types of summer squash, the crookneck, the marrow type and the patty pan, yellow, green and white, respectively. In the winter there are the green Hubbards and the yellow Hubbards.

Due to the general disrespect for seasons in the market, you may buy practically any of these at the same time. Right now the Hubbard squash is selling from 3 to 5 cents a pound. The crooked neck and the summer varieties are slightly higher.

Hubbard Best for Baking.

If you are choosing your squash for baking, keep in mind that the thick-skinned Hubbards are decidedly preferable. They are drier and sweeter than any of the others.

The versatility of this sweet-marrowed vegetable exceeds that of almost any other. They can be baked, steamed, fried or sauteed and still remain the same sweet squash.

Eggplant often successfully fills a gap in the menu. While you can buy it so reasonably, 4 cents a pound, you shouldn't miss serving it. Try it fried: Pare, cut in ¼-inch slices and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Dip in flour, then in egg, and last in sifted bread crumbs. Fry in deep fat (370 degrees F.) until tender and brown. Drain on unglazed paper. Serve immediately.

Artichokes on Hand.

Here they are, to settle for a while the salad situation—the pine-cone looking artichokes! They're high right now, 20 cents apiece, but before we know it the price will be down within our reach. Not that we mind paying 20 cents for a delicacy on occasion, but we can't afford to make them familiar visitors at our table until they're dropped a bit.

When you boil them for the next day's meal—you know they're infinitely better cooked ahead of time—put a little garlic in the water, and you'll see what an added flavor can do.

If you live just out of the city and hear those hens cackling a little louder than usual, you can just bet there's a reason why. They thought it was great fun when eggs went up to 38 cents, but now that they're 40 cents they can't restrain their glee.

In choosing grapes it's well to remember that you can't tell the quality by the size. The Delawares and Niagaras on the market now are small, but sweet. For the between meal snack you won't be able to find more appealing delicacies. And you needn't urge the children to be sure to eat their fruit.

Fresh pineapple is appearing today in the chain stores for 25 cents each. That sounds encouraging, doesn't it?

Hit-and-Miss Icebox Dessert Proves "Perfect Combination"

But she is reticent about the recipes. When pressed for the details of her delectable productions, she falls back on generalities such as, "Well, I took some of this and I think about that much of that."

Finally, pestered just too much, after her guests had raved about a dessert that seemed to contain a bit of every sort of fruit compounded into a custard and topped with whipped cream, she burst forth:

"Well, if you must know how I make ice-box desserts, I might as well tell you that I don't know myself. If there's any fruit left from breakfast, I toss it in together with any stray cherries or bananas left in the ice box. I always try to have the flavoring of the base different, using lemon or vanilla or almond extracts, perhaps a bit of grape juice. Wine makes a wonderful flavoring. But I always taste the mixture before I freeze it to be sure that it has sweetness and tang enough."

No one ever makes the famous Brunswick stew in the same way and every cook has his or her own way of putting together chile con carne. The ice box dessert offers the same opportunity for that individual touch.

With Malice Toward One

I watch you like a greedy spider—
Spin my web to catch my prey
Craftily, with neat precision
Lay my trap; prepare the way

Just to let you know that I
Was once a victim of your plotting.
You, the spider . . . I, the fly.

What's Beauty? It's Something All Can Have!

Health, Perfect Cleanliness Hold Secret, Washington Expert Says.

"What is beauty—in women?"

The question was submitted to the head of the facial salon in one of Washington's oldest beauty establishments, herself an authority on skin care.

She considered the question gravely. Then she said:

"Beauty is something of a thought. A woman has to keep her face relaxed, in order to keep lines from forming. As she grows older, she has to prevent her skin from darkening, by using correct cosmetics in the correct way, and faithfully.

Beauty Is Health.

"Beauty is health. The condition of one's system has to be considered. Daily elimination is essential. Circulation must be stimulated, through exercises and by the use of special unguents which bring circulation into the face and throat.

"Beauty is perfect cleanliness. It is one of the first things to be considered in a woman's appearance and it is the thing most neglected of all.

"In all my experience, in many countries, in teaching women care of their skin, I remember only one woman whose skin was really clean. When I took a tissue and wiped away a first application of cream from her skin, the tissue was not soiled.

"Women, alas, are lazy," she continued. "I think this is because women have not become mentally intrigued with making their skins beautiful. They have not realized that they must be immaculately clean, as well as splendidly healthy, to be called beautiful.

"Any woman," she added, "can wear any color, provided her skin is properly cared for and properly made up.

This One Gets Red Gown.

She told of a woman of her acquaintance, possessor of beautiful titian hair, who "fell in love" with a brilliant red evening gown, yet despaired of wearing it because of her coloring.

Yielding to persuasion, she submitted herself to the offices of a make-up artist and returned for a fitting of the coveted gown. Because of proper make-up, she was able to add the red dress to her wardrobe and it proved to be one of the most becoming things she ever wore.

Lad Lends a Hand And Collects Plenty!

New York (AP).—Next time Joseph Strecansky will keep his hands in his pockets—and he won't be so polite.

Joseph, 13 years old and always willing to do a favor, was standing on a street corner when a woman walked up.

"Please hold my baby a minute, will you?" she asked.

"Yes, ma'am," said Joseph with a bow. "I'd be glad to."

Joseph held the baby until the shades of night were falling and then appealed to a policeman. The child was taken to a foundling hospital.

Troubadour Fasts To Save Saxophone

Oklahoma City (AP).—Truly, the spirit of the wandering troubadour yet lives. Ask Dink Williamson.

When Dink was mowing the lawn yesterday at a filling station a stranger appeared and offered to do the job for "15 cents—to get some breakfast." Dink agreed.

"Now," said Dink, "You can get a real meal."

"No," said the stranger, a gleam in his eye, "I guess coffee and rolls will be enough for me. But I've got a saxophone in hock. There's where the ten bucks are going."

Turkey Puts Faith In Dog and Loses

The turkey picked out the top of the dog kennel as a good, safe place to roost at night. Nichols is now looking for his turkey and a purchaser for his dog. A thief stole the bird and the dog didn't even bark.

What Today Means

"Virgo."

If September 18 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 10 a. m., from 4:30 to 6 p. m. and from 8:45 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. and from 5 to 6 p. m.

You will quite possibly spend a good part of your day hectically hurrying about and in the long run you will accomplish little. Those who make a living from writing, advertising and publicity will have an abundance of ideas available which if properly used should prove fruitful. A day comparatively free from worry.

The child born on this September 18 will probably be possessed of a magnetic personality. It will, however, have entirely too good an opinion of itself, and due to its vanity will fail on frequent occasions to see the pitfalls in its path.

If September 18 is the date of your birth, you are eager to acquire knowledge and will always be possessed with the desire to improve your mind. More than likely you are a person of great nervous energy. You work furiously when you do work, but your labors lack persistence and method. You like travel and get more from it than do most people. You probably have some ability along literary or musical lines. You call many people "friend" and you take a sincere interest in them and in their problems. You must take care, in your eagerness to help others, not to intrude where you are not wanted and can do little if any good. You will probably learn from bitter experience to restrain yourself along this line.

Born on September 18, you will probably not be an outstanding individual in your life pursuit. You will get by reasonably well without too great an effort but you will have little in the way of new ideas to contribute to anything as generally dull and uninteresting as business. Should you discover some latent talent in your being, it is possible that you many make your presence known and felt in ever widening fields. A firm determination to deal justly and honestly with your fellow man will be a large contribution to those with whom you have dealings.

Successful people born on September 18:

George Read, stateman.
Mrs. Mary A. Vincent, actress.
John T. Trowbridge, author.
Charles V. Riley, scientist.

Writer Crams Year Into Three Months

New York (AP).—There's a worn look on the face of Louis G. Florey, secretary to Sinclair Lewis. He and the novelist are back from South Pomfret, Vt. They spent three months there, but it was no vacation.

"The boss wrote at top speed, morning, noon and night," said Florey. "He did a year's work in about three months. He would go to sleep for 15 minutes, wake up, and think he had slept for hours. He'd wake me and say 'I got an idea for the next chapter. Let's go.'"

Pacifist Fears U. S. Women Are Blind to World Issues

Lauds Their Support of NRA, But Deplores Lack of Interest in Arms.

Laura Puffer Morgan, recently returned from Geneva and the Disarmament Conference, surveys Washington and the women of the Nation with vague unrest.

Associate Secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, and chairman of the peace committee of the National Council of Women, Mrs. Morgan is distressed at what she sees as a dangerous, if unconscious, undercurrent of militarism in the attitude of women working so earnestly in support of President Roosevelt's emergency re-employment measures.

"When I came home from Geneva a month ago," she said, when interviewed at her office in the headquarters of the National Council for Prevention of War, at 532 Seventeenth street northwest, "I was startled and shocked to discover that for the women of America, the disarmament conference has ceased to exist, and when it is remembered, it is with a feeling of utter pessimism."

Mrs. Morgan is a woman past middle life, of distinguished bearing. Crisp, silvery hair frames a thoughtful, intelligent countenance, lighted by humorous, beautiful brown eyes.

World Issues Overlooked.

"I found every one engrossed with the NRA, to such a disturbing extent as to have lost sight of the fact that even a program of the enormity and vision of the NRA can not guarantee national security, where there is no world stability.

"And for world stability," she continued, "the success of the Disarmament Conference is a necessary condition. If the conference fails, war in Europe is the inevitable outcome, and war in Europe will not leave this country untouched."

Mrs. Morgan expressed concern

MRS. LAURA PUFFER MORGAN, associate secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, just returned from the Geneva disarmament conference, expresses concern over American women's militaristic attitude with regard to the NRA, and says she is "shocked to discover that, for them, the Disarmament Conference has ceased to exist."

lest the splendid patriotic efforts of American women in support of the NRA prove in vain, unless they work with equal success for conditions of world security through world peace.

"While devoting themselves to this great economic drive, women of America must remember that issues of peace or war for the entire world are at stake," she asserted.

Mrs. Morgan's present work for world peace follows several years' active work for war-time organizations. She arranged the first women's liberty loan conference in Washington, and was active throughout the conference in connection with Mrs. McAdoo's committee. As a member of the war service committee of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, she established a national home for college women in Government service.

Working for the cause of world peace as wholeheartedly as she served her country during the World War, Mrs. Morgan, as unofficial delegate and observer at the Geneva Disarmament Conference, during the last eighteen months, attended more peace group meetings than Arthur Henderson, president of the conference.

Calls Women World Citizens.

"Political issues are no different than economic issues," declared Mrs. Morgan, "and every woman, as a citizen of the world, as well as a citizen of her own country, should be informed and ready to assume her responsibility as such.

"I myself am one woman who has gone into the technical problem of disarmament, and I have attended all the general meetings, as well as committee meetings, on the subject.

"Governments can only agree on those measures of disarmament which the public will support," Mrs. Morgan explained. "That is why expression of public opinion is so very important, and that is where the women of America could play a tremendous part.

"Geneva was the scene of the greatest women's demonstration in history, in February of 1932, when a scroll bearing signatures of 8,000,000 women indorsing world peace, was submitted before the Disarmament Conference. These signatures represented the sentiment of 45,000,000 women in many countries, and the total was afterward raised to 13,000,000 as other signatures flowed in. The actual documents are now on exhibition in a glass case in the Disarmament Building in Geneva at one end of the hall where the delegates and journalists congregate.

They Reflect Public Mind.

"Mr. Henderson has said he can not pay too high a tribute to the women's disarmament committee for the support of public opinion they thus afforded, and such support American women must give, if countries are to work out a treaty which will provide a safe measure of disarmament among nations.

"The United States Government," she declared, "has done a great deal toward bringing success to the conference, through President Roosevelt's agreement to consult with the other powers in case of a breach of peace.

"The Disarmament Conference has a better chance of success now than ever before. Already governments have been able to make concessions—backed by public opinion—which have brought them nearer together.

"One of the reasons contributing to the success of the conference is that European statesmen realize that the political tension in Europe is such that if governments are not appeased by agreement under a disarmament treaty, another European war will be simply a question of time."

Culbertson on Bridge

A Sermon on False-Carding.

When the great French statesman Talleyrand said that "language was invented to conceal the truth" he was thinking of diplomats, and not Bridge players. And yet, no sooner does a Bridge player learn the difference between an Ace and a deuce than he plunges headlong into the difficult art of false-carding. The results are usually pitiful, for it is his partner, not the opponent, who is fooled.

False-carding without rhyme or reason at Bridge is a major vice. In fact, it almost belongs in the category of Bridge crimes. Generally speaking, the more a player false-carding the easier it is to read his bluffs. The best way to fool people is to tell them an occasional truth. No one will believe you! Besides, it requires a tremendously logical mind to be a successful liar.

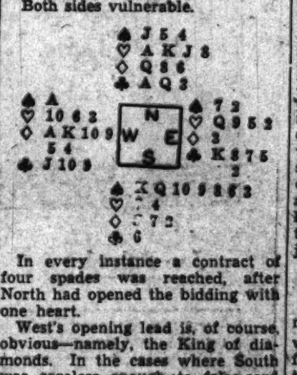
North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



In every instance a contract of four spades was reached, after North had opened the bidding with one heart.

West's opening lead is, of course, obvious—namely, the King of diamonds. In the cases where South was careless enough to false-card with the Knave of diamonds the contract was immediately defeated, as the discerning West missed the deuce of the suit and continued it. As a result East and West not only cashed two diamond tricks, but East was able to ruff the third round and, of course, West's Ace of trumps could not be shut out.

At the tables where South played the deuce on the first round, the usual continuation by West was the club Knave, and in this case the inferential discard did its deadly work. In such a situation East must not start a call after the Ace is played from Dummy, in spite of holding the King. West, when he wins the third trick with the Ace of trumps, must interpret his partner's play of the club deuce as a command to discontinue that suit. What else then is left for him to do but lay down the Ace of diamonds.

Just as a matter of history and as a suggestion that honesty pays, it might be remarked that Mr. John W. Jacobson, who submitted the hand, records that every South player made four spades on the hand except those who false-carded on the first lead. Truly, virtue brings with it its own reward.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If both sides are vulnerable and North and South have a part-score of 60, what should East bid as Dealer and what should be the final contract?

East, Dealer.
Part-score: North-South, 60.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Formal Dress Lacks Appeal For President

(Associated Press.)

Franklin D. Roosevelt, born to the formal dress strata of New York society, spurns superstiffness and is one of the most comfortably clad of Presidents.

He has a penchant for sport coats "about the house." He wears shirts with soft, sewed-on collars. His summer hats are pliable Panamas; his winter hats easy felts. He leaves the wearing of spats to the State Department.

The official portrait he expects to leave behind in the White House shows him in a gray, soft flannel suit, a strong contrast to the famous Sargent depicting the two-decade-ago Theodore Roosevelt in stiff stand-up collar and frock coat.

Dresses for Dinner.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, however, is properly formal, too. He dresses for dinner each night when formal living is in season.

But he likes his ease, and so puts off the date for donning the formal coat as long as possible. When he invited a small group of newspapermen to dine at the White House a few nights ago, he made it very definite that he was not going to wear a dinner coat, and didn't wish any of them to appear in one.

A gray morning suit is the only eccentricity in his wardrobe. He likes such a suit and always has one.

Even Wore a Seersucker.

All summer he has been dressing for the utmost possible coolness, in linens, or flannel trousers with gray or blue top coats. Some one even seemed to remember seeing him in that every-day Washington mid-summer uniform—the seersucker. More vivid are recollections of a salty vacationer in a sea-going hat, sometimes stripped to the waist.

There's one White House official who thinks the President looks his very nicest in a certain fuzzy brown suit, and for that reason welcomes cooler weather.

Jewelry appears to interest the President only for its sentimental significance. He wears in his breast pocket, dangling from the Phi Beta Kappa chain in his coat lapel, his grandfather's watch—one of the now-rare kind with a hunting case.

It Rings the Hour.

When he presses on its side, it rings the hour and quarter hour, so when he's in the dark, he doesn't have to turn on a light to tell the time—to within fifteen minutes.

He wears his father's seal ring bearing the Roosevelt crest carved into bloodstone. His cuff links are either the initialed ones his father wore, or his own souvenirs of the 1920 campaign.

Pastor Is Spiritual And Physical Help

Hartford, Conn. (AP).—The Rev. George R. La Flash brought more than spiritual comfort to Mrs. Lucy Juliano when he visited her at the hospital. He volunteered for a blood transfusion to save her life. Mrs. Juliano is now feeling better.

1 pint oysters
1¼ cups milk or cream
1 tablespoon butter
Salt and pepper
Nutmeg
2 egg-yolks or 1 whole egg
2 tablespoons flour
Cayenne

Set the oysters on the stove to heat in their own liquor. As soon as they begin to boil, skim carefully and turn them into a strainer. Add one-half cup of oyster liquor to one cup of milk or cream and make a white sauce with the fat, flour and this liquid. Season with salt, pepper, a slight grating of nutmeg and a grain of cayenne. Add one-fourth cup of cold milk or cream to the well-beaten egg or yolks of eggs. Place the oysters in the white sauce and add to the egg mixture. Cook over hot water for three minutes, or until the eggs thicken, stirring all the time. Remove from fire immediately to prevent separating. Serve with a border of puff-paste cakes, buttered toast or baking-powder biscuit. If liked, one-half tablespoon of lemon juice may be added just as the oysters are taken from the fire.

GOWN SALON—SECOND FLOOR

Walt Mason, Himself

Great Bargains.

Bargain hunting till it hurts, I infest the cheap-jack tents, and I brag about the shirts that I bought for sixty cents. In appearance they are fine, of a rather gaudy hue, with their buttons all in line and their cuffs and collars, too. As I said to Jabez Jones, who was leaning on my fence, "Why blow in a pair of bones for a shirt? There is no sense. If a fellow looks around with acuteness, truth to tell, something cheaper may be found than the local dealers sell. Note these dazzling shirts of mine, good enough for any gents, they are gorgeous, they are fine, and each costs but sixty cents. "Seems to me I hear the groans, in the sweatshops far away," said old Jasper Jabez Jones, "of poor women, bent and gray. They are making shirts likes these, with their fingers worn and sore, and they sometimes starve and freeze when the wintry tempests roar. There are weary children, too, sewing collars, sewing sleeves, making shirts of gaudy hue, and my careworn spirit grieves. Every worker is a slave, bossed by harsh and greedy men, drawing a starvation wage that would not support a hen. Thoughtless delegates like you, hunting bargains all the time, rob home merchants of their due, and indorse the sweatshop crime."

New Yorker Today

By Mark Barron.

New York.—Impertinent notes a New Yorker accidentally remembered:

Jimmy (former mayor) Walker smokes denicotined cigarettes; has been in an airplane only once in his life and apparently means to stay in Europe for some time. How do I know that last? He just sent for his furniture.

A. C. Blumenthal, wealthy erstwhile pal of Walker's, has spent "mucha dinero" in an attempt to cure his hay fever, but hasn't. "Blumey's" preferred hobby is collecting expensive perfumes.

Lillian Gish never smoked until she played "Camille," and then she would take only a couple of puffs a performance.

Party Shrine.

Speaking of that "so goes the nation" State, $50,000 is being raised to purchase the Elisabeth Marbury home in Maine as a shrine for the Democratic party. For years Miss Marbury was one of the chiefs of the Democrats, even up to the time when she could attend the national convention in Houston only by being carried there in a wheel chair.

Jane Ferrell has been maid and secretary of Lenore Ulric for years. She plays a small part in every Ulric show.

Rear Admiral Byrd admits that he sometimes has felt fear on his expeditions. Which is consistent, because every hero I ever interviewed has admitted that he has felt fear, but kept going on just the same.

The Czechoslovakian section of Manhattan is in the east seventies. Queen of that neighborhood is the actress, Blanche Yurka, who was tutoring Libby Holman when her husband's death occurred. Miss Yurka lives with her school teacher sister, Rose, and speaks five languages fluently.

Star-Ways.

Broadway stars aren't always nice. A brunette I know has a very disagreeable temper. She borrowed money from her bankrupt manager so she could marry and then deserted that manager. Justice didn't, as you might think, catch up with her. She's still a star, although she does have another manager.

Romney Brent, the Mexican actor who became such a favorite with Broadway and London, feels despondent after every opening, although he always lures successful reviews. Just the mood dolores of the Castillian.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

An Experience With Feet.

J. F. B. writes: I have had a long experience in trying to find shoes that keep my feet comfortable. This experience with fallen arches and related foot troubles commenced with my high school football days. Some of the conclusions based on it I set down for the guidance of others.

1. Each case requires individual study and a man might as well make up his mind to do the job himself. I was not helped by physicians who advised me, and I soon learned that what salespeople told me was not helpful. In fact, it was usually just about the opposite of what I should do.

2. Wide-toed shoes, like those built on the Army or Munson last, are the most harmful type for some cases. The Navy last, between the Munson and the English, was a far better one in my case.

3. The stronger and tougher the leather, the firmer and more unyielding the construction, the better. This does not mean iron shoes. It means that a shoe which is right when it is first put on should stay just as it was, with no stretching or change in shape. New shoes, fitting fairly well, I found gave me most comfort. Old, stretched shoes increased the discomfort due to my arches. In these I put lightweight arch supports which I bought for 10 cents.

4. The principle of shoe building which I found to be nearest right is that of the bandaged foot. That is, the shoe should come as nearly as possible to doing what a properly applied bandage does, by fitting the shape of the foot. The shoe should permit flexibility of movement, but without changing shape or stretching.

5. Exercises for the arches, to strengthen the muscles, and also walking pigeon-toed, are valuable.

C. of C. Polls Business Men On Carriers

Will Seek Views About Transportation Rivals in Survey.

(Associated Press.)

The United States Chamber of Commerce proposes to find out—by a canvass—what the rank and file of the Nation's business men think about further equalizing competition among the three major carriers, rail, water and highway.

It has instituted a poll, based primarily on the report of a representative committee which recently ended a study of the carrier problem.

The committee in its report stated: "Unregulated competition with regulated forms of comparable transportation is unfair, contrary to the public interest in the losses which are caused and inequitable to shippers whose interest is in dependable service and conditions."

Oppose U. S. Barges.

The majority report of the committee included the following proposals, submitted as questions in the poll:

Water transportation in domestic commerce—"All common carriers should be required to obtain certificates of public convenience" and should be subject to regulation as to rates. Those not common carriers, but accepting cargoes for hire, should charge the established common carrier rates. Government operation of commercial water transportation should be discontinued.

Highway transportation in interstate commerce—Motor buses and other passenger carriers—"should pay a special user tax in the form of a mileage tax, graduated according to seating capacity."

Users' Tax for Trucks.

Trucks should pay a users tax, "reflecting fairly the demands each makes upon the highways." The gasoline tax "should be kept down to a point not encouraging wholesale evasion."

Intrastate carriers should adhere to "rules that are just, reasonable and nondiscriminatory among shippers."

Interstate regulation—"There should be the same degree of regulation by Congress of interstate motor carriers as has been recommended to the States for intrastate carriers as to permits to operate, rates, financial responsibility and hours of service. The interstate regulatory authority should act as an appellate body."

Champion Farm Girl Milks 15 Cows Daily

Pomona, Calif., Sept. 17 (AP). Helen Goedhart, 17, of Norwalk, won the title of champion farm girl of Southern California at the Los Angeles County Fair.

"I got my training by milking 15 of my father's 150 dairy cows every morning," she said.

Radio Waves and Ripples

Singing with Paul Whiteman's band in an N.B.C. broadcast from New York's Hotel Biltmore is Jane Vance, above. With the return of football comes sportswise Christy Walsh to a microphone Friday night. Central figure in Columbia's weekly "All-America Football Show," he'll spend most of his time about the grid camps, looking for predictions.

AHMED ABD ELWAHAB PASHA, Egypt's under secretary of state and finance, cotton economy expert, will tell what he thinks of the National Recovery plan from an NBC microphone tonight at 8:15. Ahmed Pasha has been in Washington several days looking over the NRA from the inside.

And that Hurley-NRA tie-up will start radiologically a week from Wednesday at 8 p. m. The Hoover War Secretary was the first big G. O. P.-NRA convert.

Cogent NRA pronouncement is expected from Interior Secretary Ickes in the U. S. Conference of Mayors address Saturday in Chicago. Columbia will broadcast him at 8:15 p. m.

Official radio observance of Emancipation Day will be Commerce Secretary Roper's address from WJSV Friday night at 8:15. "The Negro's Opportunity and Responsibility in National Recovery" is the Roper topic.

One pair of shoes cost Connie Boswell $4,000.

And without them she can not walk.

Several years ago this member of the Boswell Sisters, radio-stage team, was stricken with infantile paralysis. For months she shuffled laboriously about studio and dressing room until she learned of a New Yorker who specializes in making walking gear for paralytics. He made casts of her feet and fashioned shoes from them. Connie Boswell paid the $4,000—and walked.

The Boswells, Connie, Martha and Helvetia, come to the Capital Thursday, broadcasting from WJSV that night, and starting a vaudeville run at Loew's Fox Friday.

If rain is the forecast, the patter of tiny drops will sound from your loudspeaker. Thunder will boom above the static when a summer shower's near. And when the sun will shine is to be presaged by playing of cheery tunes.

Jim McGrath, local NBC staff announcer, is a collector of old musical instruments. He has one he calls the ophaklyde. It looks like a straight barytone horn, but it has the mouthpiece and bore of a trombone, the keys of a saxophone.

"Audiences at the National Electrical Exposition in Madison Square Garden, New York, Friday, September 22, will see as well as hear 16 crooners soothing the air waves at one and the same time"—NBC news release.

Drive Pushed To Aid Lagging Heavy Industry

Steel Continues Drop as Auto Production Takes Spurt.

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—With consumer spending expanding in gratifying degree, the past week, saw more intensive efforts to push heavy industry into the procession of recovery.

Steel production and several related lines continued to lag, as they have for the past several weeks, while automobile production took a new spurt. Mercantile reviews reported further widening of the retail buying movement which showed such pronounced progress in August.

The basis of the improvement in retail trade was manifest in the Department of Labor's statistics, indicating an 11 per cent increase in pay rolls during August and a 6 per cent gain in jobs.

Purchasing Power Rises.

This was regarded as clear evidence of the enlargement of purchasing power, in part at least through the influence of the Blue Eagle, since these gains occurred in a month in which industrial production generally shows moderate recession.

The analyst index of production for August was calculated preliminarily at 84, against 89.4 in July, when the summer upswing reached its peak.

It is the production of capital goods—such as manufacturing equipment, buildings and heavy machinery—whch is lagging, and the administration's drive to bring it into line is concentrating on expansion of credit.

Steel Outlook Alarms.

The publication Steel said unless there is a reversal of trend within the next ten days, steel mills will enter the last quarter of the year practically devoid of orders.

Loadings of revenue freight for the week September 9 were estimated at 571,387 cars, a drop of 95,265 from the previous week, reflecting the Labor Day holiday, but 69,850 over the like week of last year.

Cram's estimated automobile production for the week ended September 16 at 48,053 units, up 7,686 from the previous week, and more than double the volume of the like week of 1932.

Wealthy Creek Indian Must Pay $200 Alimony

Muskogee, Okla., Sept. 17 (AP). Eastman Richards, second wealthiest of the Creek Indians, has been denied a new trial of Lometa Elliott's suit in which the comely Indian woman won $200 monthly alimony and $3,000 attorney's fees.

Miss Elliott said she was Richard's common law wife.

Barbara Stanwyck Coming in Person to Earle—Preview of a Hit—a Tenor Wanted

Has Scored Hit in East; Spitalny Needs Voice; About Showshops.

Barbara Stanwyck, one of the screen's most engaging personalities, whose achievements on the stage are scracely less notable, will appear in person on the stage of the Earle Theater as star of the vaudeville bill booked for the week beginning Friday, September 29, according to announcment made Saturday by John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner Brothers' interests in the Washington territory.

Miss Stanwyck, who in private life is Mrs. Frank Fay, since appearing with her husband in their joint revue, "Tattle Tales," has been headlining in the East and has scored a sensational success everywhere she has been seen.

Unlike most cinema stars engaged in a tour of personal appearances, Miss Stanwyck presents an offering that is said to justify a high rating as exceptional entertainment. This may well be, for Miss Stanwyck is no stranger to the traditional theater of flesh and blood.

Debut in Chorus.

Born in Brooklyn in 1907, her first stage appearance was made in the chorus of a musical show in 1923, under her real name of Ruby Stevens. Later in the same year, she toured in the "Follies of 1933," still under her own name.

Subsequently she gained prominence as a cabaret dancer, and in 1925 appeared again in the summer edition of the Ziegfeld "Follies." At the Hudson Theater, New York, in October, 1926, she played Dot in "The Noose" and the following year scored the outstanding hit of her stage career in the role of Bonny in "Burlesque," with Hal Skelly.

She appeared in "Burlesque" throughout the long run of that Broadway hit and did not make her debut before the cameras and microphones until 1929.

Many Screen Hits.

Since that time Barbara Stanwyck's name has been inseparably linked with such popular screen successes as "Ladies of Leisure," "Illicit," "The Miracle Woman," "Ten Cents a Dance," "The Bitter Tea of Gen. Yen" and a long list of others.

The booking of Miss Stanwyck at the Earle the week of September 29 signalizes the coming to the Capital of one of the most important personages of the celluloids announced for the new season of 1933-34.

Among the notables paying tribute to the glorious voice and superb artistry of Mme. Frances Alda by their attendance at Loew's Fox Theater last Friday night, the occasion of the famous diva's debut as a distinguished luminary of picture house vaudeville, were the following: Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Theodore A. Walters, Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Federal Reserve Governor Eugene Black, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Hugh A. Drum, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert Hugh Patterson, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Guy B. Henry, Harlee Branch, Assistant Postmaster General; Mr. and Mrs. William W. Bride, Judge and Mrs. Rush Holland, Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Mondell and numerous others.

The Met Steps Out.

For the benefit of those who may prefer to do their minute observing through the columns of their favorite newspaper, we hasten to set down that if a close scrutiny of the newly refurbished Metropolitan Theater were made it would disclose that the entire entrance has been done over in a silvery gray with the box-office panelling contrasted in darker tones of the same color; that the lower lobby has been recarpeted in a rich, deep blue material and the single crystal chandelier replaced by three semi-modernistic ones, greatly increasing the brilliance of the lighting; that the upper panelling of red has been replaced by a shimmering blue damask and the coming-attractions frames conspicuously altered; that the auditorium has been improved by the installation of new wall-bracket lighting fixtures, the lowering of the stage two full feet, the installation of a new screen of larger dimensions than the last, new proscenium draperies and the uncompleted reconstruction of the back of the house to provide an inside foyer for the accomodation of SRO crowds; that the rest rooms have been entirely done over; that the balcony has been repainted and recarpeted and the old lighting fixtures replaced by new; that the central dome of the theater has been completely rehabilitated in new tones and the Metropolitan, thus, once more placed among the most completely equipped and most comfortable picture houses the Capital can boast.

Presenting Verdi's "La Forza del Destino" in the Capital for the first time in many years, the Metropolitan Civic Opera Company will make its debut in Washington next Sunday night, under the managing directorship of Miss Maria Verdi and with a cast of notable artists, led by Giuseppe Radaelli, Della Samailoff and Martini Rossi. Tickets are on sale at the Mayflower, Willard, Uptown Ticket Agency, 1606 Twentieth street; the A. A. A., the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau and the Washington Auditorium, where the performance will be given.

Wanted—A Tenor.

If there is a young tenor in Washington who can meet the requirements of an organization engaged in both stage and radio work, an engagement awaits him. This, it may be said, is one of those rare opportunities that comes not very often, parhaps only once, sometimes never at all, in a singer's professional span of life.

This, of course, all sounds very cryptic—which it is—but the fact of the matter is, it is none other than Phil Spitalny, conductor of the extraordinary orchestra now fulfilling a two weeks' engagement at the Earle Theater, who is in the market for a tenor to take the place in the male octet, appearing with the orchestra, of a member who has resigned to accept an engagement with a new Shubert musical production.

Requirements to Be Met.

The requirements to be met are that the applicant must be at least 5 feet 9 inches in height, of personable appearance, able to read music and possessed of a tenor voice that will pass the audition tests which necessarily will be imposed by Mr. Spitalny and his associates.

Applications may be made in person backstage, at the Earle, to Bill Lissing, director of the double quartet, any afternoon, up to and including Wednesday of this week. The salary, one is tipped off confidentially, is one that may not be scorned.

Lenore Ulric, who is now rehearsing the Walter Hasenclever-Julian Thompson comedy, "Her Man of Wax," at the Ambassador Theater in New York, has emphatically denied that she will appear in a motion picture for RKO-Radio, or any other producer, as incorrectly reported recently in certain quarters. Miss Ulric is under contract to star for Lee Shubert in the new comedy to be seen in the National Theater as the first of the season's road attractions the week of October 2, and will not undertake picture work of any nature until after her engagement in this play, say the Shubert offices. Following the Washington premiere, "Her Man of Wax" goes directly into New York.

Preview of Smash Hit.

On last Saturday morning a special private screening was accorded the dramatic desks of the local press in the projection room of the Fox Film Exchange of Columbia Pictures' much vaunted production of "Lady for a Day," in which May Robson achieves one of those immediate triumphs that lend such tremendous zest to one of the most romantic of the professions.

"Lady for a Day," adapted from Damon Runyon's short story of "Madam Le Guimpe," is a made-to-order audience picture. A great deal of it is the veriest "hokum"—which, as we have pointed out frequently before, is merely a picturesque vernacular's term for something that everybody likes—but with all its sentimentality, Broadway jargon and flamboyant character drawing, it is a picture that distinctly and unequivocally "has something."

This department's major criticism is that after having lifted Apple Annie from the curbstone to the momentary status of a society dowager occupying the most expensive suite in the smartest hotel in New York—in order that her European convent-bred daughter may marry the son of the Spanish count who travels all the way from Spain to discuss dowry and family trees—the picture leaves her in all her finery on the dock bidding her daughter, safely married, a bon voyage back to Spain, without either reducing her again to curbstone fruit-hawker or establishing her as a bona fide social registerite, merely fallen on evil days.

"Unfinished Symphony."

As far as the character of Apple Annie is concerned, "Lady for a Day" is an "unfinished symphony"—although several of this column's confreres already have given battle on the subject.

At any rate, it is a 100 per cent bullet-proof entertainment, with Warren William, Guy Kibbee, Walter Connolly, Nat Pendleton, Hallie Hobbs, Glenda Farrell, Jean Parker, Ned Sparks, Hobart Bosworth and hosts of others rendering May Robson such support as she has never had before in front of any man's camera—all of which will soon be open to corroboration soon at Manager Hardie Meakin's RKO-Keith Theater, situate fronting the United States Treasury on Fifteenth street.

Comfort Note:

Never mind, maybe the next tropical hurricane will reach Washington on time, just as it has been scheduled, and then you won't be disappointed. After all, we can't have everything!

Costarred for First Time in Victorian Drama

Edward G. Robinson and Kay Francis, as they appear in the principal roles of "I Loved a Woman," the First National production that was given its world premiere Friday as the reopening attraction at the Warner Brothers' renovated and refurbished Metropolitan Theater. It is heralded as the first of a season of "Pledged Entertainment Hits" and affords Genevieve Tobin the finest role of her career in pictures. What "Eddie" Robinson can do with a role of this kind was conclusively demonstrated in First National's "Silver Dollar."

Holy See Denies Plan To Make Easter Stable

Vatican City, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Denial that a commission of cardinals would be named to reform the calendar and set a definite date for Easter each year was made in the Osservatore Romano, official vatical organ, today.

"The Holy See maintains it is unnecessary to abandon the tradition of a mobile Easter," the denial said, "and prefers to ask the advice of the ecumenic council whether reformation of the calendar be approved, in principle."

Wheat Dumping By Soviet Feared

Advisory Group Gloomy on Eve of Session.

London, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—The threat of renewed Soviet dumping tonight cast gloom over delegates here for the first meeting of the newly organized International Wheat Advisory Commission tomorrow.

Fourteen countries are represented on the commission, set up at the recent London Wheat Conference to see that the world wheat agreement is observed. The pact calls for price raises and reduction in wheat acreages for the next two years.

Helen Hayes Quits Movies for Stage

Will Take Leading Role in "Mary of Scotland."

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—Helen Hayes, returning from Hollywood to the New York stage, begins rehearsals next week in the leading role of Maxwell Anderson's drama, "Mary of Scotland," which the Theater Guild will prpduce.

Miss Hayes, who appeared in "What Every Woman Knows" and "Coquette," has not been on Broadway since the season before last.

Coke Company May Abandon Union Stand

Frick Firm, Long Labor Organization Foe, to Consider Code.

Uniontown, Pa., Sept. 17 (AP).—First indication that the H. C. Frick Coke Co. may abandon its strong antiunion policy and accept the coal code came tonight in a statement by Thomas Moses, president.

Pickets were lined up, meanwhile, before practically every mine in Connellsville coke area, where 30,000 miners walked out Wednesday in protest against delay in reaching a code agreement.

Strike leaders predicted that "not an ounce" of coal will be produced in the section unless Frick, a United States Steel subsidiary and largest operator, recognizes the United Mine Workers. The company has operated nonunion 40 years.

"We merely want to know what we are signing," Moses said. "We are going to be sensible."

Asked specifically about section 7, the collective bargaining paragraph of the act, and his concern's attitude on that, Moses said:

"We are not going to disobey the law. If this means the Government expects under the NRA to compel us to recognize a union we assuredly will give it serious consideration before taking any positive action."

U. S. Envoy Reaches Turkey.

Madrid Halts Revolt Plot Of Radicals

Troops and Police Patrol Capitol as Plan Is Uncovered.

Madrid, Spain, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—The new government of Premier Alejandro Lerroux moved swiftly today to suppress a threatened general strike by radicals tomorrow.

The capital was patrolled heavily, army troops assisting police in maintaining order. Trucks filled with police were stationed at army barracks, where agitators were believed to have gained sympathy among enlisted men.

Authorities indicated they had uncovered a plot against the new government by Socialists, Syndicalists, Communists, Amarchists and some army elements.

One report said the government had learned that several sergeants planned a "revolt of a Republican right wing nature."

Precautions were especially strong in the vicinity of Carabanchel, where roads were guarded rigorously by units of civil guards and police.

Locust Horde Covers Big Area in Uruguay

Montevideo, Uruguay, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—The first warm weather brought a swarm of locusts, covering an area of three-quarters of a mile to the Paysandu Territory, today. Authorities expect a locust plague this summer because of early spring droughts.

They are preparing a widespread campaign, including construction of cross-country barriers and use of poison sprinklers by airplane.

Traveler Dies at 85 Going to World Fair

Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 17 (AP).—Frederick Lane, 85, Concord, N. H., died in a hospital here today.

Faculty Staff Cut 35 in Pittsylvania

County Term Reduced to Eight Months.

Chatham, Va., Sept. 17 (Spl.).—Pittsylvania County public schools will begin the 1933-34 term on Tuesday, with teachers' contracts signed for eight months. There has been a reduction of about 35 in the number of teachers employed in the county. It will be found, however, that a number of women teachers have married since last June, and as this automatically causes dismissal in this county, it is probable that the number losing positions is much less than the 35 reported.

The only change in high school principals is in Chatham, where E. B. Broadwater succeeds. A. G. Carter who has accepted a similar position in Virgilina. Mr. Broadwater comes to Chatham from Charlottesville.

Maryland Veterinarian For Racing Is Stricken

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 17 (Spl.).—Dr. Henry J. McCarthy, Baltimore, for many years the Maryland Racing Commission's veterinarian on all State tracks, is in a serious condition here with a heart attack.

He was here for the racing meet this week.

No Honor

Chicago, Sept. 17 (U.P.).—Clarence Shashaguea, 30, paid his way into the World's Fair to see a fan dance tonight after failing to become the first man to sneak into the grounds.

Shashaguea tried Friday night to crawl under one of the heavy wire fences. He got his head under the fence, then got stuck. The following morning, police found him, with his head pinned under the fence. They had to call the fire department to release him.

Shashaguea said all he wanted was to see a fan dance so the policemen and firemen took up a collection of $2, declaring they would rather do that than risk having to get him free again.

Nominating committee for national officers, State and National congress relationship committee and service agencies.

Joy Elmer Morgan, editor of the Journal of the National Education Association and chairman of publications for the national congress, will preside at the meeting tonight of the publications committee, which will consider the future publishing program.

Trade Abated By State Auto License Wars

Reciprocal Agreements Sought to End Series of Highway Rows.

Chicago, Sept. 17 (AP).—Retaliatory disputes over automobile licenses are retarding highway commerce between a dozen States. Within the past year a dozen, paired across adjoining lines, fined each other's trucks and passenger cars for lack of licenses.

Arrests by South Dakota officers of Iowa truckers drew threats of retaliation from the Hawkeye State, a conference has been arranged for September 29 in Chicago. Meanwhile Iowa officials have promised not to halt South Dakotans trucking pigs to the Sioux City, Iowa, market.

New Jersey, acting after its trucks and buses were forced last winter to register after 15 days in Pennsylvania, passed similar legislation. Its Legislature authorizes retaliation in kind to any State imposing restrictions greater than those of New Jersey.

All summer officers in Nebraska and Kansas halted trucks from across the line for failure to buy licenses in both States. Last spring Colorado and Nebraska figured in a similar row. Nebraska offered complete reciprocity with both States, but the others insisted on restrictions.

Disputes flare up occasionally among Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and Kansas. Oklahoma laws require a short term license for out-of-State trucks.

Row Blows Over.

Last month Indiana trucks were halted in Arkansas. Arkansas laws permit foreign trucks to carry out merchandise, but require a State license if they are commercial trucks for hire. The Indiana license department threatened retalliation, but State police refused to order the arrest of Arkansas truckers.

Idaho and Washington set up a five-mile zone inside each boundary within which trucks may operate without foreign licenses. Trucks may make eight trips a month between Virginia and Tennessee without two licenses.

Sleeping Sickness Deaths Checked

Few New Cases Reported in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Sept. 17 (AP).—For the first time in weeks isolation hospital received no new "sleeping sickness" cases today.

There were only three deaths and seven new cases reported, bolstering belief the epidemic is declining.

The number of cases reported so far is 853.

Strikers Plan Picketing Philadelphia Garages

Philadelphia, Sept. 17 (AP).—With tons of freight tied up in warehouses, several hundred striking truck drivers and helpers today met to plan picketing of garages.

Union leaders claimed more than 3,000 men walked out yesterday in a demand for higher pay, shorter hours and recognition of the Brotherhood of Transportation Workers.

MONDAY SEPTEMBER 18, 1933 Sports

Myer Is Nat Hero, Hits With 3 on and 2 Out to Trim Tigers, 4-3, in 9th

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

NO less an authority than the American League vital statistics informs us that before yon descending sun sets behind the gas house this evening, the Nats may be celebrating the conquest of their third American League pennant.

No joke, there's a chance that they have been jocularly calling the American League pennant race may be decided before nightfall, and the pennant brought to Washington beyond the inevitable shadow of a mathematical doubt.

It can all be brought about by the simultaneous developments out at Griffith Stadium, where the Nats play the St. Louis Browns, and up in the Bronx, where the Yankees will be meeting the Chicago White Sox in a double header.

Would Be All Over.

If, perchance, the White Sox should engineer a mild upset and take both those games from the Yankees, and if, perchance, the Nats win today's game, then it will be all over except the world series' shouting.

Washington, in that case, will have an 11-game lead in the race, which can not be overhauled under any circumstances. There is another way for the Nats to win the pennant. If they win three of their remaining 10 games, they will be "in" regardless of the possibility that the Yankees might take all of their remaining 13 games.

Rain Has Helped.

The Nats have been the chief beneficiaries of the weather man's antics in the waning games of the season. Rain, which deprived the Nats of only two games, has robbed the Yankees of four chances to whittle the Washington lead, and consequently the Yanks will play only a 150-game schedule instead of the regulation 154 games.

The last vestige of Yankee hope vanished yesterday when it was learned that the New York Club would make no effort to play off two postponed games with Cleveland, which might have been arranged next Friday before the Indians return West, a day which is an open date for both clubs.

Where Is Simmons?

I am reminded that Al Simmons, in his ill-timed, ill-conceived broadcast two months ago, said that the Nats would fold up when the stretch rush for the pennant began and the Yankees would walk home with the flag.

But with the pennant beckoning, Joe Cronin's crew has not slackened its pace. Known this season as a poor home club, the Nats have solidified their chances during the last two weeks with a brilliant stand at Griffith Stadium that has seen them win 10 out of 12 games with the West. If that is folding up, Mussolini is a private in the rear rank.

Last Inning Rallies.

The Tigers particularly have felt the fury of the Nats' unquenchable spirit. Three times during the four-game series which ended yesteday, the Detroit club had victory in its grasp only to find the game rudely jerked out from under in the last inning.

On Friday the Nats went into the ninth two runs behind and won the game, 4-3. On Saturday they clamped a 10-inning defeat on the Detroit club. Yesterday again they went into the ninth trailing by a run and came out of it winning by a run.

Runs, Hits and Errors.

That fast ball Bridges was throwing yesteday was fast . . . and the reason little fellows like Bridges and Gomez can smoke the ball over the plate like they do is timing . . . Clark Griffith, a little fellow himself, modestly admits that he had great timing as a pitcher . . . Dave Harris will never live down the fact that Johnny Kerr pinch hit for him in the ninth . . . and Sam Rice didn't even wince when Bridges' pitch hit him a smart crack on the elbow to fill the bases in the ninth. Only one of the Nats' four pinch hitters was charged with a time at bat . . . the Nats concluded their 22 games with Detroit, showing 14 victories and 8 defeats . . . and now have no chance to lose a season series with any club in the league . . . with Travis playing third base and Dave Harris in right field, Washington fans have a fair idea of how the Nats will line up in 1935.

Sharkey 9-5 Choice Over Levinsky

$50,000 Gate Expected; Sharkey Confident of Victory.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17 (AP).—After a three days' postponement, Jack Sharkey, former world's heavyweight champion, will meet Chicago's wild swinging former fish peddler, King Levinsky, in their 10-round outdoor battle in Comiskey Park, home of the White Sox, tomorrow night, weather permitting.

The contest, originally scheduled for Friday night, was postponed because of adverse weather. With the promise of warm, clear weather tomorrow night, Promoter Sammy Wolff has hope of a $50,000 gate, which will enable him to meet Sharkey's guarantee of $25,000, give Levinsky 20 per cent after all expenses have been paid and wind up with a few dollars for himself.

Sharkey, hitting the perilous comeback trail of the ring, will engage in his first bout since he was knocked out by Primo Carnera, three months ago and lost the world's title.

The Boston former gob, installed a 9-to-5 favorite, evidently believes he will win easily as he has signed to box Tommy Loughran in Philadelphia, September 27, for another $25,000 and then take on Patsy Peroni, a Cleveland walloper, in New York, at a later date.

The postponement did not injure Sharkey or his Chicago challenger. Both were in superb condition after their light workouts today. Levinsky has whipped himself into the best shape he has been in two years, while Sharkey gave the appearance of being a fighter craving a battle. Levinsky expects to enter the ring weighing about 203 pounds and Sharkey about 200.

The battle, bringing together a scientific boxer and a free-wheeling walloper, promises to be a rollicking affair as long as it lasts.

Giants Need Pair, Nats Three to Win

New York, Sept. 17 (AP).—The Giants and the Nats moved a step closer to the 1933 baseball championships of the two major leagues today, even though the New York Yankees did cut a half game off the Nats' lead.

The Giants, by beating out St. Louis, 4-3, wiped the Cubs off the list of rivals who have a mathematical chance to beat them out, leaving only the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Pittsburgh, in a virtual tie with Chicago for second place, but having 11 more games to play, can be eliminated by two Giant victories.

Despite their apparent loss today when they won a last-minute 4-3 decision from Detroit while the Yankees were taking two games from Cleveland, the Nats need only three victories to clinch the American League flag.

Loughran Gets $10,000 Demand

Norristown, Pa., Sept. 17 (AP). Joe Smith, manager of Tommy Loughran, tonight reported to police a telephone call demanding $10,000, "or there'll be no Loughran-Sharkey fight" had been received at the Valley Forge Golf Club, where the fighter is training.

Loughran is to meet Jack Sharkey in a 15-round bout in Philadelphia next week.

Smith said he took a call for Loughran and after hearing the demand for $10,000 was told: "In a couple of days you'll get a letter telling where to leave the money. If you don't leave it, or try any funny stuff, it'll be just too bad.

The manager told police the speaker hung up after he asked who was calling.

Wide Response Greets Post's Baseball Contest As Fans Seek Box Seats to World Series Games

No essays to write, few rules and regulations to observe. Simply fill in your pregame version of the opening game of the world series in New York and forward it to The Post's Baseball Contest Editor.

To the Winners.

To the second-place contestant, The Post will award three box seats to all the games played in Washington.

To the third-place contestant, The Post will award two box seats to all games played in Washington.

Awards will be made on a basis of points for the correct prognostications of the score for each inning, the run totals, hit totals, error totals and batteries.

The contest will close at midnight Saturday, September 30.

Minneapolis Wins, 6-4, Evens Playoff Series

Players and Manager Separated by Hunger

Minneapolis, Sept. 17 (AP). Hunger separated Manager Ray Blades, Secretary R. J. Rhode, Coach Mike Gonzales and Substitute Andy High of the Columbus American Association team from the rest of the squad on their trip here, it was learned today.

N. B. A. Fostering Racket, Is Charge

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 17 (AP).—The National Boxing Association will be asked to cancel its affiliation with International Boxing Union at the opening session of its annual convention here tomorrow.

Edward C. Foster, of Providence, chairman of the Rhode Island State Athletic Commission, said he believed the N. B. A. was "fostering a racket and encouraging chiselers" by maintaining its present relation with the international group.

Post Mortems . . .

Although Cliff Bolton did not make a hit for the Nats yesterday when he took Sewell's place at the tee, his reputation for being a pinch hitter helped a lot . . . Schulte was on second at the time, but Harris ordered Bolton intentionally walked, despite the fact that it put the winning run on the bases . . . this fixed it so that the bases were filled when Rice was hit and thus both of the needed runs could score with ease on Myer's winning drive . . . the Friends University football team, of Witchita, Kans., is practicing at 5:30 . . . each morning . . . because several of the members of the squad had to work after classes.

Jock Sutherland, Pittsburgh's football coach, has one habit that is very popular with the fans . . . in the final game of the year, when a senior is taken from the game, Sutherland rises from the bench . . . and meets the player just as he steps from the field . . . to shake hands . . . there will be several women pilots in the President's Cup races . . . but there is no truth to the story going around to the effect that the Marx Brothers will enter a canoe . . . in the outboard races . . . which will be propelled by an egg beater held over the back.

Giants Down Dizzy Dean And Cards

Giants Score Two Runs in First; Ott Aids With 22d Home Run.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17 (AP).—The New York Giants eliminated the last mathematical chance for the Chicago Cubs to overtake them to the National League pennant by defeating the St. Louis Cardinals, 4 to 3, here today.

Dean Mound Victim.

To Dizzy Dean it was a bittersweet game—sweet because of the new motor car fans presented him before the game, and bitter because of the 11 hits the Giants combed out of his pitching.

The Giants opened a strong offensive in the second when Ott doubled and Davis bunted. Ott beating the throw to third. Singles by Mancuso nad Ryan scored Ott and Davis.

In the third, Terry beat out a single and was swept home by Ott's homer.

Cronin Making Shifts to Give Men Rest

Bluege and Manush Take Day Off; Slab Regulars Also Will Idle.

WHILE everyone else in the baseball world has been talking about the Nats being the next American League champions, it was not until yesterday that Manager Joe Cronin gave even a hint that such might be the case. He did not indicate as much verbally, but by his actions, with respect to yesterday's series finale with the Tigers and today's opener with the St. Louis Browns.

The Nat leader started Cecil Travis at third in place of the great fielding Bluege and also rested Manush, this latter change calling for the shifting of Goslin to left in order to make room for the loquacious Sheriff Dave Harris in right. As to today, Cronin figures that a day's rest will do his regular "big four" mound staff some good, and so will call on Al Thomas, Bob Burke, Ed Chapman or Ray Prim. Alec McColl also will be one of the possibilities if he reports his ailing salary wing is normal again.

A fellow does not have to be very smart to figure along with Cronin in these acts. He has the world series in mind, and between now and then will shift around his players so as to have them all fresh and fit for the big push.

As Friday's rain robbed the women fans of their weekly treat, they are invited to be guests of the Nats this afternoon.

"The Nats have a great team," said Bucky Harris, Tiger pilot, while packing up to leave town, "but you don't want to hold those Giants too lightly. They're something like the Washington Club—not what you might call sensational, but good all around and steady and reliable. Personally, I look for a great world series and a tight one."

Four brilliant plays were made in the first four rounds yesterday. In the second, Fox came in to make a shoe-string catch of Sewell's pop to end the round with a Nat crossing the plate. Dave Harris raced back and snared Bridges' long looper at arm's length overhead in round 3, with Kuhel and Weaver collaborating on a nifty on the very next play. No. 4 on the list was Gehringer's grab of Harris' near Texas Leaguer after it appeared the ball had passed him. This play ended the home fourth.

TEN thousand of the citizenry were treated to another of the Nats' copyrighted pulse-throbbing finishes yesterday at the ball yard, where Tommy Bridges and the Detroit Tigers went into the ninth inning with a 3-2 lead and came out of it with a 4-3 defeat.

Buddy Myer was the perpetrator of the deed with his big bat that plagued Master Bridges all afternoon and put the finishing touches on the ball game in the perfect setting of the ninth inning, the bases full, two out and the Nats a run behind.

Myer Comes Through.

In the box score Myer is credited with a single in that ninth inning, but that lusty wallop he cracked far into right center field was good for three bases under any circumstances other than those which saw the tying and winning runs score ere he reached second base on the blow that propelled them home.

That was the third of Myer's hits during the afternoon when the little second baseman accounted for exactly 50 per cent of the safe blows yielded by the frail but talented Bridges, who was out there outpitching Monte Weaver in an attempt for his fourth victory of the season over the Nats.

Step Nearer Pennant.

That blow by Myer lifted the Nats another peg toward the pennant despite the twin triumph of the Yankees over the Indians up in the Bronx, and the race has now reached the stage where Washington needs but three more victories to claim the flag in the name of Clark Griffith. Ten more games remain on the Nats' schedule.

Bridges went into that ninth with his one-run lead, walked Fred Schulte to open the inning, and then ran into a flock of pinch-hitters that arrested the attention of the throngs edging toward the exits.

Sends Schulte to Second.

The crowd gasped when Manager Cronin withdrew Dave Harris and sent Johnny Kerr in to pinch hit for him—a fact that Harris has vowed to conceal from his grandchildren. But Cronin's strategy was quickly apparent when Kerr tried to bunt. One strike was called and one bunting attempt he missed, but he dared to bunt on the third strike and a perfect sacrifice sent Schulte to second.

In came Heinie Manush to bat for Bluege amid the cheers of the 10,000 which were converted to low moans when Manush swung viciously at a third strike and missed. With two out, Bridges was now in a fair way toward winning his ball game.

Bolton Is Walked.

In came Cliff Bolton, perennial hero of the Nats' last ditch rallies, to pinch hit for Sewell, and Bridges, on orders, walked Cliffy. In came Sam Rice to pinch-hit for Jack Russell, the fourth of his ilk. Sammy took two balls and two strikes. The next pitch he took on his elbow and the bases were filled.

Thus the ball game hinged on Buddy Myer, who had already driven out a single and a double. Myer took one ball from Bridges. The Tiger pitcher's next offering was smacked high, wide and handsomely on a fine trajectory into right-center between Outfielders Stone and Fox, and Schulte and Bolton

Havre de Grace Opens Major Racing Season Today With Program for Charity

61 Race Days In Maryland This Fall

Three $10,000 Contests Are High Spots of 12-Day Meeting.

New Starting Gate to Be Used; Bowie Also Has New Device.

BIG league racing returns to Maryland today after an absence of three months with the opening of the 12-day meeting at the Havre de Grace track. Until Bowie brings the campaign to a close on November 30 there will be turf action in the Old Line State each week-day with the exception of three days. The fall cycle is the usual one. After Havre de Grace, Laurel has the spotlight for 25 days, starting October 3; Pimlico will hum with activity from November 1 to 11, and then Bowie gets under way on November 15.

Today and tomorrow will be charity days at course popularly called "The Graw." Four other welfare programs have been scheduled in the State this fall. Both Bowie and Laurel will devote their first two days to the cause. Pimlico contributed from the spring meeting this year.

The features of the Havre de Grace meeting are the renewals of three important stakes, each of $10,000—the Potomac, Eastern Shore and the Havre de Grace Cup handicap.

Should Draw Good Horses.

The three stakes at Havre de Grace should bring to the starting points the best horses in training because the stakes that follow, with one exception at Laurel Park, and possibly one or two at Bowie, will be the largest to be offered in Maryland this fall.

How the racing centers elsewhere will affect the Havre de Grace meet remains to be seen. So many first-class tracks are running this month that not as many horses as heretofore will be seen in Maryland. Rockingham will cut in heavily, it is believed, as will Detroit, which is having its first racing in 40 years. There also will be racing in Illinois, Kentucky, Ohio, Canada and New York.

With the Laurel meet, however, new racing material will be seen. The same should be true at Pimlico, and particularly so at Bowie. As the season progresses, more racing stables will move into Maryland from many quarters.

New Gates to Be Used.

Havre de Grace will use a new model of the gate employed to keep horses straight at Pimlico. This device is said to be much better than the old one. Jim Milton also will send the fields away without the use of a barrier. Jim completed his starting job at Rockingham yesterday.

Bowie also is expected to have a new gate on hand, one of the creations of Joseph B. Boyle and Thomas K. Lynch.

Besides being an authority on flood control, he has gained an enviable reputation among educators for his sponsoring the educational program by which college students divide their time between classroom and regular employment.

A roof much older than this Nation, and more than half as old as Christianity, covers the Mariemont, Ohio, church illustrated above. The roof originally covered a barn at Totbury, England, where it remained for 980 years before it was removed to America 20 years ago.

It is made of stones, and during the moving process each stone was numbered and listed in a master plan so that today the individual stones occupy the same relative positions they had when they were first laid 1,000 years ago.

One of the strongest baseball games ever witnessed was played several weeks ago in San Francisco, at the Presidio, Government Army base, when 18 soldiers, each wearing a regulation gas mask, formed two teams and met on the Army baseball field. The game was a regular nine-inning contest.

Havre de Grace, Sept. 17.

Dear Al:

Maryland, my, Maryland! Yea, bo! Your old friend Bennings is right on the job. Haven't changed my purpose either. Right here to supply you the most winners and keep you from going to sleep when you read your favorite selector. My first glance at the entries for tomorrow left me with a half-mile-track taste in my mouth. However, as this card and Tuesday's is for charity, I'm overlooking that fact. Expect the good horses to be on hand before the week's out. Met my No. 1 clocker, Mike. He's been here for the most part of a week. All his good things are mudders and as the track looks like it will be fast by post time, I'm letting Mike's picks alone. I'll see you when the Washington Special slides into the shed.

BILL.

First Race—With three representatives in this maiden sprint, it looks like the Labrot interests are out to start the big-time season with a winner. Of the group named, I prefer In Clover, although Treadhaven has worked well and Leonie has shown promise. If anything else gets in the money, Rose Bearer should be it.

Second Race—This race offers a lot of possibilities, and much depends on the condition of the track. I believe conditions will best suit the speed of Commuter, which is dropping down a peg in class. Was a beaten favorite in his last outing at Hawthorne, but before that ran a whale of a race with a $2,500 field. The big surprise of the race may be provided by Axentea. This one is in excellent shape. Of course that win by 10 lengths at Marlboro can not be taken too strongly. However, condition is there. Towee for the rest.

Third Race—Prince Pomey has run only two really bad races, and one of his good efforts would take the big end of the purse. Dreel comes down from Rockingham, where he took three straight. Figures to be close. Toytime has been around Maryland all summer and may make this close.

Fourth Race—Pencader and Jimmy Sullivan should prove the winning combination here. In fact, I can't imagine what the excuse will be if this gelding fails. Even Up and Brass Monkey appear to have the edge on the others.

Fifth Race—Pomposity ran a powerful race in the Lawrence Realization up at Belmont and drops nine pounds to take on this field. If sent to the post with serious intent, this should not be close. Dark Hope won at Rockingham and may be second. Fingal for the show.

Sixth Race—Barry beat a $2,000 field at Chicago, and gets in this with his favorite low weight. I see no reason for mistakes, unless it's the short price. However, a purse is a purse these days. Lone Hand was good among a cheaper set at Rockingham. Small Change is a young half-miler that shows promise.

Seventh Race—Flaming Mamie is a standout in the final. Has her speed, as demonstrated at Marlboro, and has the best, good-track form in the group. Cruz will ride. Rock Coventry and Light Breeze for the other money awards.

Howard Eleven Starts Drills Thursday

Good '32 Frosh and New Talent Expected; Better Reserves Are Seen.

WITH most of the forward line gone, by way of graduation, Howard University football aspirants return for the beginning of training Thursday. Last year's cocaptains, Payton and Greenlee, will be missed in tackle and the end positions loom up in need of replacement. The strongest line position seems to be the center, with two of last year's regulars returning to continue their fight for the first team. However, indications from last year's freshman team and new men entering the university point to a determined fight by a number of big men for the guard and tackle positions.

Probably Howard's football team will have a stronger reserve line during the approaching football season than has been the case in years. Certain it is that the coaching staff will be made happy by a number of men just under 200 pounds who have sent word that they will be on the line at the first call this season.

Quarter Berth Puzzles.

Last year Howard had only one quarter back, whom it has lost by graduation. The coaches will be considerably puzzled to discover some one to fill that difficult position. They will seek to solve the problem by shifting one of last year's regulars to the signal-calling job in the hope that out of the new material there will emerge enough good men to make up the rest of the ball carriers.

Capt.-elect "Tarzan" Johnson proved himself last year the best defensive back on the team. During the summer he has been keeping in condition to become this year's indispensable ball carrier.

The season opens October 14 with St. Paul at Howard. This game probably will prove a thriller as it was last year, when Howard won by one point.

Washington A. C. Wins.

Around the Ring . . .

By Bill McCormick.

YESTERDAY on these pages a noted boxing authority wrote of the various ways famous heavyweight fighters trained for their battles. In a smaller way our local boxers encounter much the same conditioning difficulties as their more illustrious colleagues. And regardless of the importance of the outcome to the fistic world in general it is just as essential to a $20 preliminary boy to be in condition to block or duck a beak-busting bang as it is to a member of the upper crust battling to attain or retain a championship.

Perhaps of all the regular local performers Marty Gallagher is the hardest to condition. Days and days of hard grinding are necessary to whip the Foggy Bottom heavy into a condition, even remotely resembling the proverbial "pink." Given a few days lay-off from training and he immediately expands into a condition resembling Aunt Minnie's overstuffed sofa. This proclivity for getting out of shape through no fault of his own may have cost Gallagher a large spot in the fistic sun.

Fighting for Fun.

Young Van, a local light-heavy, offers a splendid example of the delicacy and finesse required to whip a boxer into top fighting condition. Unlike many who seek a future between the ropes, Van was fairly well fixed financially. He had a good job and very few of his acquired shekels slipped between his fingers foolishly. He started to fight more for the fun of it than anything else.

Van was so successful in his first dozen or so ring engagements that he began seriously to consider divorcing his job and fighting for a living. He spent hours in the gymnasium and covered miles on the road in preparation for a fight that was to decide his fistic future. Result—he stepped into the ring too finely drawn—and was rocked to sleep in jig time by a powder-puff puncher. A return match, for which he trained faithfully, terminated the same way.

Surprised Even Himself.

Later, after a long layoff, Van returned to the wars against one of the stiffest local punchers—Henry Irving—and surprised everyone, even himself, by remaining perpendicular to receive a draw. For a return fight he trained hard—and lost the decision by a wide margin.

The answer in Van's case lies in his job—which requires him to shove, push and lift about large "beds" of type, weighing some 90 pounds, for eight hours. That is training enough for any fighter—when commingled with a few rounds of boxing to sharpen up timing. Van has been absent from the ring during the enervating summer heat, but will return to the squared circle this winter, perhaps the better fighter for not training so faithfully.

Needs Much Training.

Petey Sarron, who fights faster than most pugs can shadow-box, needs plenty of careful training to give him the stamina for his whirlwind tactics. The longer a boxer has been following the feature-scrambling racket, the longer he must train to reach the apex of condition. Le Roy Dougan burst upon the local horizon as a preliminary boy and battled several unimportant bouts before whipping himself back into top-spot form.

Billy Strickler requires plenty of hard work before a fight and Les Kennedy needs rounds and rounds of boxing—and very little else—to put him at his fighting best. Bob Godwin makes a fetish of physical condition. He trains incessantly by chopping wood, by digging up any terra firma not nailed tightly down and by jumping rope. The only difference between Godwin's pre-fight living schedule and his ordinary daily routine lies in a few rounds of boxing to adjust pace, timing and judgment of distance.

Accomplished Rester.

Jimmy Reed is an accomplished rester in the ring. A shave and a hair-cut are often the only concessions he makes to training. Frankie Fullam, perhaps one of the smartest boxers ever seen hereabouts, simply refused to train. The former C. U. star did not dissipate, but neither did he train, which accounts for the fact that he could look so consistently bad while winning with such apparent ease.

Despite all the ballyhooey, to the contrary, which was engendered for publicity purposes, Maxie Rosenbloom is always in pretty good condition. He boxes several times a week, which keeps him in good general shape, and substitutes dancing for roadwork.

Most of the local boys lead abstemious lives, but there is one middleweight here who trains faithfully for weeks, then undoes all the good in one night by going into a huddle with the cup that cheers. Which is indeed love's labor lost.

Between rounds: Local ringworms are clamoring for a Billy Jones—Unknown Winston setto . . . which should pack any fight club hereabouts . . . If Unknown isn't still running away from Jones, as reported . . . Billy Strickler's kid brother Dick, who weighs 175, wants to be a fighter . . . If he can't get into the Naval Academy or West Point . . . so Billy is working to get him into the Academy or West Point . . . K. O. Burns, who fights on the Alexandria Elks card Monday, is reported greatly improved . . . and his record shows it.

G. W. Gridders End Practice At Camp

(By Staff Correspondent.)

CAMP LETTS, Md., Sept. 17.—George Washington U.'s football players were packing their duffelbags this afternoon preparatory to returning to the familiar soil of the District tomorrow morning. Coach Jim Pixlee decided to break camp a day ahead of schedule to facilitate registrations for the first semester which opens Wednesday.

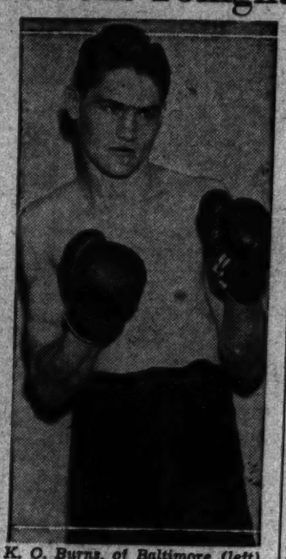
Practice today was brief. Clad only in their shorts, the players scampered through signals, kicked and passed the ball, and ran relay races for an hour in the afternoon. Tomorrow morning they'll be up before the sun for a real workout at 5:30 o'clock. Immediately after breakfast the move on Washington begins.

Despite the numerous injuries which beset the squad during the past week, if is returning home in fine physical condition, thanks to the efforts of Roland Logan, trainer. Logan succeeded in ironing out the wrinkled muscles and "Charley-horses" which hampered a score of men. "Chris" Doose's broken nose and "Red" Hoyle's broken hand will keep them on the sidelines another week at least.

The various mechanical contraptions used in practice here were dismantled today and shipped to the city. They will be reassembled for use at Griffith Stadium after the world series. No practice is scheduled in Washington tomorrow. Work will be resumed Tuesday on either the Tidal Basin field or a secluded spot on the outskirts of the city.

Bolstring flowing beards of two weeks growth, a group of the players tonight presented "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" for the edification of their teammates. This will be the last bit of "horse-play" until the final game of the season.

Elks, Fort Offer Good Cards To Lure Ring Patrons Tonight



K. O. Burns, of Baltimore (left), and Carey Wright, of Washington, who fill feature spots on the two cards listed hereabouts tonight. Burns meets Henry Irving in Alexandria, while Pepper Young will be Wright's foe at Fort Washington.

Davis to Meet Koshover; Irving Pitted Against "K.O." Burns.

TONIGHT is assay night on the local boxing front. Roddy Davis will be cast into the crucible of real, top-notch competition at Fort Washington, and a new club dedicated to glove propelling, will be tested and tried by the public at the Elks Auditorium in Alexandria.

Davis, an up-and-coming local youngster, whose career has been very carefully nursed in the past, will be given his first taste of real competition against Maxie Koshover for eight rounds at the Fort. Koshover, while not so flashy in the ring, is believed by many to be a better boxer than Davis, and to be able to push a boxing glove with more force than the Northeast lightweight.

Davis' best chance is believed to lie in extreme aggressiveness. If he can stay on top of Koshover from bell to bell, he may walk away with top honors; but should he elect to box it out at long range, it is highly probable that Cincinnati Maxie will win with ease. Should Davis walk from the ring a winner tonight, he will have justified all the nice things said about him by his managerial staff. It the result is otherwise, the dark suspicions of a large portion of the fight public will be confirmed—to their satisfaction at least.

The Alexandria Elks Club bouts are headed by a natural club fight, involving two glove pushers who fling them high, wide and sometimes handsome—Henry Irving and K. O. Burns—in an eight-rounder. Burns has shown great improvement in recent bouts, and promises to make things too interesting for Irving, unless the latter is able to land his well-known, sleep-producing right in the early rounds.

The Fort Washington main bout is backed up by an eight-rounder between Carey Wright and Pepper Young. Wright, a stablemate of Davis, also is on the upgrade, having clicked off 19 consecutives wins. Young boasts a good record and may prevent Wright's string of victories from reaching round figures.

Bob Lowry and Soldier Clarke in a six and fours between Doug Swetnam and Soldier Shasburger and Mickey Lewis against Soldier Larkin will round out the Fort card.

The Alexandria Elks' card will be supported by sixes featuring Cowboy, Hughey Gray and Phil Furr, Pete Bevans against Charley Thompson and fours which bring Joe Raspi face to face with Jimmy Larkin and Joe Green against Feeby Shoemaker.

Action at both clubs is scheduled to get under way at 8:30 o'clock.

Nats Being Shifted To Rest for Series

Travis made a nobby stop of Fox's hot grasser in the seventh.

In the home half of the lucky frame, Bridges walked Russell on four successive wide ones. He must have heard of that hit Jack made at the start of the last Western trip and feared him.

Myer made a fine falling catch of Hayworth's pop to short right ending the alien ninth—and that was no mean effort of his at bat ending the home half, either. It would have been at least a triple under ordinary circumstances, but he did not run it out.

Bladensburg Junior High Team Is Planned

Bladensburg Junior High School for the first time in its history will be represented this year in intra-county athletic competition on an ambitious scale.

Robert Wilson, new principal of the Bladensburg School, who formerly coached boys' sports teams at Maryland Park High School, has announced that candidates for the soccer team will be called this week, as well as aspirants for the girls' field ball team, and that the school also will be represented by both boy and girl basket ball teams, a baseball nine, a girls' volley ball team and a track squad.

Lanham Nine Wins.

Lanham A. C. baseballers bowed to White Havens, 4 to 5, in a ten-inning struggle yesterday afternoon on the Lanham diamond. A wild throw by Chester Mills, Lanham second sacker, allowed the winning run to register in the extra frame.

Magruders on Top.

Magruder Park A. C. conquered the Fort Myer Heights Juniors, 5-4, yesterday at Riverdale to even their series, each having won one game. All the scoring was in the first two innings. Four tallies in the second inning gave the winners an edge which they held.

Grid League Meeting.

The District Independent Football League will have its first meeting tonight at 8 p. m. at 1346 H. street, northeast. All managers of unlimited teams in the District and suburbs are urged to attend.

Tomorrow at 8 o'clock at the same place 150-pound teams will assemble, with the 135-pounders meeting on Wednesday night.

Dor-A, Stanton Win League Contests

DOR-A and the Stanton Cleaners were winners in the two Capital City League games scheduled yesterday in the unlimited class. Dor-A had quite a battle on its hands in disposing of Congress Heights, 4 to 3, but the other game proved to be a rout for the Stantons, who wallo

Bishop Praises Recovery Plan At Cathedral

Dr. Freeman Tells P.-T. A. Lives Must Change With Industries.

Never has America been called on for more sober, serious thinking, and rarely has there been less of it than now, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, told the National Parent-Teacher Association, yesterday.

"The muddy currents of life run so swiftly that we too infrequently plumb them to discover their shallow depths," he added.

He commended the national recovery act as a dramatic experiment in economic reconstruction.

"It is so stupendous that the world looks on with amazement and wonderment," he continued. "We are being called on to mobilize industrial machinery so that the shadows of a national catastrophy may be dispelled."

Recovery, he stated, means also a reconstruction in the home, a broader plan of living, and greater fidelity in domestic matters.

"If we build recovery on economic grounds alone, we build on shallow foundations," he asserted, and observed there is "already evidence that people are responding, and a new glimmer of promise lights the horizon."

Treasure Hunted on Bottle Clew

George P. Bradley with what is believed to be the clue to a treasure island in the southern Pacific Ocean, and Miss Mabel Hutton, Nashville, Tenn., a member of the party that will accompany him in quest of the gold and pearls.

Buried treasure!

A dying man on a tiny isle off Borneo; a note in a bottle cast into the sea and unnoticed for 35 years. And now an organized search for the pirate loot.

These are the reasons George P. Bradley, of San Diego, Calif., is in Washington at the Everett Hotel, 1730 H street, northwest. He found the bottle and note on a lonely beach along the Mexican coast a year ago, he says, and now is seeking several persons who share his faith and will join in the quest. So far he has found four, including a woman.

They are: Miss Mabel Hutton, Nashville, Tenn.; F. M. Sheehan, Woodbury, Long Island; George R. Akin, Jacksonville, Fla., and Beach Kellar, North Brookboro, N. C.

Thrilling Story Told

The message Bradley has bears the signature of James Farley, and is dated August 18, 1897. The faded handwriting tells a tale of having been captured by Chinese pirates, of a shipwreck, of escape with the treasure, of waiting for death on an island in the Southern Pacific.

A daughter, Nellie, Stockton, Calif., is mentioned. Bradley has a letter, sworn before a notary in Florida, from Robert E. Cummins, Orlando, Fla., stating he knew a man named James Farley in San Francisco, with a daughter Nellie. Cummins says in the letter that Farley sailed for Australia in 1893.

Bradley says he had the writing in Farley's letter tested by a chemist in the Carnegie Technology Institute, of Pittsburgh, who found it to be the juice of a tropical tree. The paper is of a type used in the period the letter is dated.

The messages found by Bradley were written in on two separate sheets of paper. One contained a map of the island.

Here's the Very Letter.

The first message read:

"To whoever finds this which I am about to cast into the sea—help—I am cast away on an island who's latitude (deleted by Bradley) and longitude (deleted).

"For three years I have been a prisoner to Chinese pirates who have raided several pearlers and other vessels and have accumulated a vast amount of wealth which I have saved from the wreck and buried under a rock on the south end of the island and under a cross, over $40,000 worth of gold and silver coins and a stone jug over half full of pearls.

"Eleven perfect black pearls of immense size and 143 others that are over one-half inch in diameter. The rest are smaller. I am all alone and can not live much longer. So I only ask the finder to give one of the black pearls and $10,000 of the money to my little daughter, Nellie Farley, who lives there with a Mrs. Susan McCarty, in Stockton, Calif. Find her, please, and give her this and the rest is yours, and may God bless you. "JAMES FARLEY.

The second message, with the map, reads:

"There is no water on this island which is very small and I have no hope for myself, but please help my little girl when you get what I have hidden.

"Many other valuable things are buried nearby. There are letters with the money that will tell you all.

John J. Brooks, 16 years old, of 424 Todd place northeast, a telegraph messenger boy, was struck at Twelfth and H streets northeast by an automobile operated by James G. Bursenos, of 107 E street northwest. The youth was riding a bicycle. His skull was fractured. He is in a serious condition in Emergency Hospital.

D. C. Rum Sale Code Prepared

Limited Profits and Firm Control Mark Plan to Be Given King.

Looking toward repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and regulated sale of liquor in the District, Rufus S. Lusk, national legislative officer of the Crusaders, said yesterday he had formulated a code which he hopes would satisfy both dry and wet factions here.

Lusk said his plan would ban saloons, provide for analysis of liquor offered for sale, limit excess profits, and in every way offer positive control of liquor business.

He advocated appointment of three District beverage commissioners to control liquor sales. Their salaries would be $9,000 for the chairman and $7,500 for the others.

They would have power to license a limited dividend corporation which would be given exclusive right to dispense all liquors, wines and beer having an alcoholic content of more than 3.2 per cent. Only the stores appointed by this corporation could legally handle the sale of liquor for consumption elsewhere.

Lusk said he intends to submit the plan in the next few weeks to Chairman King of the Senate District Committee. King announced last week that he planned to hold a hearing on liquor control legislation for the District prior to the convening of Congress.

U. S. Warned Wives' Ouster Is Dangerous

Woman's Party Executive Decries Regarding of Sex or Marriage.

Mrs. Anna Pollitzer, vice chairman of the National Woman's Party, yesterday declared Government discrimination against married women a "dangerous step." Her statement came in connection with the dismissals of married woman clerks in the adjutant general's office.

"Married women have a right to work. Those in the adjutant general's office apparently work because of necessity, as well as because they are familiar with their jobs. Some have been in 14 and 15 years and one has served 34 years.

"Officials say it would be unfair to put in the furlough system as that would be taking one day's pay from low-salaried clerks. However, married folks in the lower brackets, by these dismissals, will lose half of their incomes.

"The contention of the National Woman's Party is that neither sex of the worker nor marriage is grounds for dismissal."

New Plan Sponsored by The Washington Post.

They will be open daily from 9:30 a. m. until 9:30 p. m. They can be reached by driving out Massachusetts avenue to Observatory Circle, following the circle to Davis street, thence to Wisconsin avenue and south on Thirty-seventh street, approximately two blocks south of Mount Alto Hospital.

From the downtown section, they can be visited by way of Q street, through Georgetown, then north on Thirty-fifth and Thirty-seventh streets through Burleith, to the corner of Tunlaw road.

Attorneys Confer In Wage Dispute

Bricklayers' Demands Will Be Aired Today.

A meeting between attorneys in the wage dispute between the Catalano Construction Co. and bricklayers employed in the erection of the Phelps Vocational School will be held today.

Corporation Counsel Bride has been withholding a $3,000 payment to the construction firm pending final settlement of the controversy, which attorneys will attempt to iron out today.

Death-House Hunger Strike In Seventh Day

Charles Harris, Awaiting Execution Protests "Conditions."

The seventh day of a hunger strike will be started today by Charles Harris, under sentence of death in the District Jail for the murder of Milton W. Henry, Washington gambler.

Since last Monday he has not eaten. Neither has he shaved or bathed. He is protesting, he said, against general conditions imposed on him in the death row.

He wants a light so that he may prepare a brief of his case for Governor Olson, of Minnesota, who has become interested in his plight.

"What I want is peace and quiet," he said. I don't care if they put me in solitary confinement. Anything is better than this where eleven condemned colored men surrounding me are constantly singing spirituals. It makes it difficult for me to keep my mind on my case."

He said jail attendants are not responsible for his present plight. Any order to remedy the conditions must come from "higher-ups," he declared.

Hopkins Asks Stricter Rules

Assails Using Migratory Workers Instead of Labor at Home.

Stricter control over labor and industries in Maryland, Virginia and other States to remedy a "serious problem" resulting from stranding of transient workers was asked yesterday by Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Emergency Relief Administrator.

Assailing employment of migratory laborers when local help could be used as the cause of considerable suffering, he made plain government relief funds expenditures would be curtailed in a effort to discourage it.

Federal relief funds should not be used to move the transients who have been left without money after they have been discharged and left stranded by employers, he said.

Such aid has been requested, but Hopkins stressed that responsibility of caring for such persons must lie with employers and States.

Besides the States bordering the Capital, he said, the situation was serious in New Jersey, Texas, New Hampshire, Colorado, Michigan, Illinois and the Pacific Coast area.

"A number of States in the past have encouraged employment of seasonal migratory workers in industrialized types of agriculture," Hopkins continued. "These workers and their families have followed seasonal demands for their labor, and, to a considerable extent, the practice continues.

"Proper control of labor needs within the States will prevent surplus labor from entering seasonal fields. Local and State labor should be called upon, which, under present conditions, can supply needs without necessity of calling upon or permitting outside workers from entering these fields, thereby causing considerable suffering.

"Fields available for transients therefore are not intended for this type of nonresidents. State relief administrators are advised to cooperate with labor and employment exchanges to the end some control both of industries as well as migratory workers is effected."

He Smashed Way Into Jail; And Were His Cheeks Red?

Colored Man Routs Six Officers From Bed at Laurel Station.

It was a very puzzling night for Adams, colored, of New York. Maryland State police said it started at Waterloo, Md.

Six irate policemen, hastily risen from their beds, confronted him. It was their station and dormitory he had broken into.

He was lodged in Hyattsville Jail, charged with damaging property, drunk and disorderly conduct.

Police Sidestep Accident Query

3 Forces Claim Mishap Not Their Worry.

The conflict of authority over police jurisdiction of Military road in Arlington County caused a belated start of an investigation of a hit-and-run accident in which two persons were injured Saturday night.

Charles Eaton, bandsman at Fort Humphreys, and Miss La Verne McLaughlin, 24, of Alexandria, were knocked down by an automobile while walking near the Washington-Hoover Airport.

Arlington County, U. S. Park Police and Fort Myer authorities disown jurisdiction of Military road, where the accident is supposed to have occurred.

Miss McLaughlin was treated for slight injuries at Emergency Hospital. Her escort is in Walter Reed Hospital, injured about the head and shoulders.

Local Anglers Rout Two Cities In Fly Contest

Baltimore and Wilmington Trail in Reflecting Pool Event.

Members of the Capital Casting Club snared enough imaginary gamefish yesterday at their second annual tournament in the Reflecting Pool to defeat Baltimore, 30 to 17.

Whipping artificial bait in and out of floating targets, the District anglers won most of the prizes, while Wilmington, Del., the third competing team, scored but one point.

W. H. South, House Office Building, won the ⅜-ounce distance bait test; George Babylon, Baltimore, the ⅜-ounce event, and Dr. Neidenthal, Baltimore, captured the accuracy test.

In the ½-ounce cast, Dr. William Holton, of the chemistry department of American University, took first place. He also won the wet-fly accuracy test and the accuracy plug.

The Capital Casting Club has several prominent fishermen on its roster, Charles McIntire, 1862 Ontario place northwest, secretary, said yesterday.

77,000 to Fill Schools Today; Gain of 3,500

Heavy Budget Cut Raises Problem With Classes Overcrowded.

Washington's public schools, facing budget cuts and a 3,500 increase in enrollments, will open today to admit 77,000 boys and girls. Resumption of activities will inaugurate one of the most important experiments in mass education ever attempted, school officials said.

The entire summer has been devoted by Supt. Frank W. Ballou and his assistants to ways and means of operating within a budget cut to $8,540,713, without wholesale dismissal of teachers in the face of a sharp increase in pupils. Personnel changes have been restricted largely to retirements and transfers.

The retrenchment program will require supervisors to do some teaching and, in the elementary system, place as many as three schools under one principal. Classes will be larger.

Additional School Opens.

Only one additional buliding is ready for occupancy, the Rose Lees Hardy School at Foxhall road and Q street northwest. The Kenilworth school is new, but offers no additional facilities since it merely replaced a row of portables.

Children starting to school must be 5 or older by November 1, for kindergarten, and 6 by November 1, if they are going into the first grade. Parents have been obtaining admission slips for several days, but thousands of pupils must qualify today, bringing birth certificates or other proof of age. Vaccination certificates must be presented.

Vaccination clinics will be held at 10 a. m. on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays of this month at 301 C street northwest. In October the regular Wednesday and Saturday schedule will be resumed.

High Schools Congested.

Pupils promoted to junior or senor high schools will report at 9 a. m., except those assigned to afternoon classes at Eastern. These will report at 2 p. m. Children in elementary grades should report to the rooms they occupied last year.

The greatest congestion will be at Western and Eastern high schools, which are scheduled for larger enrollments than last year when double-shift programs were in effect. Roosevelt, crowded beyond capacity last year, will be called upon to handle even greater numbers this fall.

Work on the proposed Woodrow Wilson high school in Chevy Chase is only in preliminary stages. It will be at least a year and a half before this structure is completed.

Police protection, at least, will be adequate today when the crush is at its worst. Motorists have been warned by police, Traffic Department, A. A. A. and civic organizations to drive carefully in school areas. The schoolboy patrol will be organized and sent to duty immediately.
